48-Hour Week Ordered to Spread Jobs

FDR AND AIDS PLAN FURTHER WORK FREEZES

Propose Forcing Agricultural Labor to Return to Place on Farms.

32 AREAS NOW AFFECTED

Dayton, Akron Only Cities In Ohio Placed Under Ruling Explained By Byrnes.

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — The administration has ordered a minimum 48-hour work week for "all employment" in 32 critical areas and proposes further to solve the manpower problem by freezing essential workers in their jobs and by forcing former agricultural labor to return to the farms.

Agricultural workers who fled to the factories should be given the choice, said Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes, of returning to the farm or going into the armed services at less pay either way. And he said those on the farms should stay there.

Byrnes revealed also in a radio address last night that the war department "was considering the practicality of using army men on the farms" by issue of peak season furloughs. But he said no plan had been agreed upon.

The 48-hour work week, ordered into effect in 32 areas, was established by Mr. Roosevelt as a national policy. It was left to Chairman Paul V. McNutt of the manpower commission to decide how widely it should prevail. He named the 32 critical areas which now include only Dayton and Akron in Ohio.

The work-week order protected all time and one half overtime pay rights of labor under contract or under the wage-hours act.

Deputy War Manpower Chairman Fowler W. Harper said war industries now were working an

PAPER CUT DUE

Newspaper Allotments To Be Reduced 10 Per Cent More.

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Another 10 per cent cut in the print paper allocation for newspapers is in prospect for April 1.

To set at rest widely-circulated reports of much deeper curtailment, the war production board's two top officials dealing with publishing problems issued a joint statement yesterday reporting a reduction of not more than 10 per cent appeared to be sufficient to meet the pulpwood shortage situation.

Such a curtailment would not work "undue hardship" on any publication or cripple the essential wartime services performed by newspapers, said the statement signed by W. G. Chandler, chief of the printing and publishing division, and Donald J. Sterling, consultant in the newspaper and publishing industries.

Nab House Prowler By Fast Action

2-Minute Dash By Police Cruiser Lands Man In Jail Cell.

Reaching North Lake park two minutes after their cruiser radio received the police broadcast at Park avenue west and Walnut street last night, Patrolmen Richard Hecht and Carl Beard captured a prowler who is being questioned in connection with a series of other home ransackings.

Arriving at police headquarters early for their third shift duties, Hecht and Beard started their cruiser patrol just in time to hear Desk Sergeant Ora Fair broadcast the report of a prowler in the basement garage at the home of Charles Reed, 262 Park Way drive. Mrs. Reed had reported the incident by telephone to her father, R. A. McBride, 21 Wellington avenue.

Using their siren alarm, the patrolmen warned other traffic of their race to the Reed home, arriving too late to trap the intruder. With flashlights they searched the park area, finally running down their quarry in a chase around the lake shore. Their captive is a 27-year-old Oakenwaldt avenue man.

Acting on information previously received Captain Paul Whipp dispatched the patrolmen to the home of a 16-year-old youth who also is being quizzed concerning a series of home prowlings reported

SEES INFLATION GREATEST PERIL

Publisher Chevalier, Speaker at C. of C. Dinner, Calls For Rigid Control Steps.

By KEN WOODMAN

"Inflation may well destroy all that we are fighting for . . ." Col. Willard T. Chevalier, publisher of Business Week, last night warned more than 360 members and guests at the 32nd annual dinner of the Mansfield Chamber of Commerce.

"Inflation," he said, "is a poor word to describe the greatest danger now facing the home front. It is a danger there is no easy and palatable way to overcome.

"The economic thermostat of the nation is out of whack," he said," and only rigid manual controls will prevent runaway prices and provide a reasonable parity between the amount people earn and the amount of goods available to buy."

Chevalier listed the proper distribution of manpower as the second major problem of the home front.

Citing the national war production goal for 1943 as $93,000,000,000 the publisher explained: "We are now trying to equip the greatest army in the history of

'10 Per Cent City', Aim Of New War Bond Drive

SEEK TO HAVE MANSFIELD TOP ENTIRE STATE

Committee of 35 To Launch Drive Friday; Two Cities In U. S. Have Distinction.

Heralding a campaign to make Mansfield Ohio's first "10 per cent city" in war bond purchases, a committee of 35 businessmen was named today to carry on an intensive drive to reach that objective.

Appointed by Paul M. Eliot, county war bond chairman, the committee will meet in the Chamber of Commerce assembly room Friday to launch the campaign. Eliot said it is hoped that the goal will be achieved within a week.

Only two cities in the United States, both smaller than Mansfield, have attained the distinction to date, Eliot was informed. Mansfield was selected as the most likely applicant to try for it since, by past purchases, it has a higher percentage of firms signed on the 10 per cent payroll deduction plan than any other city in the state, Eliot said. Only 29 firms which employ more than 25 are to be signed before the goal is reached.

To qualify for the 100 per cent rating, it is necessary that 90 per cent of the city's firms which employ more than 25 persons, including city employes, be signed on the 10 per cent payroll deduction plan. Purchases of individuals and employes of smaller firms are expected to increase the percentage.

"The campaign represents another opportunity for Mansfield to achieve state and national recognition," Eliot pointed out "and owing to the fact that so much of the job has already been completed, its accomplishment should not be so difficult.

"Every citizen should be personally interested in seeing this goal achieved," he went on stressing that full attendance of the committee was expected at Friday's session.

With the slogan "Make Mans-

COLD WAVE DUE

Snow and High Winds Will Hit Mansfield Tonight.

Don't be fooled by rising temperatures and scattered thunder showers during the next few hours.

There's a cold wave with generous portions of snow forecast for Ohio before tonight fades into Thursday. And winter will return on the wings of strong winds, the state weather observer warned this morning.

"Rising temperatures with showers and scattered thunder storms today, followed by a cold wave and snow tonight, with strong winds," is the official forecast.

Bricker's Costs Top Davey By 25 Per Cent

Former Governor's Expenses In Last Year Were $269,000,000, Against $339,000,000 for 1941.

EDITOR'S NOTE — This is the second of a series of stories on state expenditures under Gov. John W. Bricker.

The stories of the three wire services—Associated Press, United Press and International News Service—on the biennial budget for the state of Ohio, as proposed by Gov. John W. Bricker all pointed out the same thing.

That was that his budget request was $21,000,000 more than was spent during the preceding two-year period. Bricker had asked for a total of $366,028,921, the largest budget in Ohio's history.

But none of those wire services went back any further than the preceding biennium. However, those figures are available, as compiled by the municipal research bureau of the Cleveland Chamber of Commerce, an organization which would hardly be accused of wanting to be anything but fair to Bricker.

The bureau's figures trace annual state expenditures back as far as 1937, when Martin L. Davey was governor and was being called the most extravagant governor Ohio had ever had, a charge

BOY KILLS SELF

Galion High School Pupil Dies of Revolver Shot.

GALION — Believed despondent over his school problems, Raymond Ricker, 15, Galion high school sophomore, took his own life with a revolver last night at his home, Coroner O. R. Kackley of Crawford county said.

The youth was found by other members of his family in his parents' bedroom about 6 p. m. with a wound in his forehead. He was taken to City hospital where he died about an hour later.

The youth was the second young suicide victim in Crawford county in the past six weeks. Peggy Castleberry, 14, Crestline high school pupil and former Mansfield girl, took her life Jan. 2 by shooting herself in the head.

The Ricker boy lived with his step-father and mother, Arthur and Gertrude Ricker Shumaker in Renschville, a short distance west of Galion.

Surviving are his parents and a sister, Elenora Maxine Ricker.

CITY MARKING TIME ON OHIO TIME CHANGE

Clocks To Be Turned Back One Hour Feb. 21 at Some Points, Others Won't.

CITY SEEKING RULING

Solicitor Studying Shift as Banks, Other Business Plan Discussion Sessions.

Mansfield today was marking time on changing time to conform to the state legislature's decision yesterday to set Ohio's clocks back one hour on Feb. 21 to change from eastern war time to eastern standard time.

Industrialists, bankers, merchants, city officials and others were unable to say definitely which time will be followed, the consensus being "we'll have to get together and do something about the two-timing."

Clarence W. Marks, president of the Mansfield Clearing House association and assistant cashier of the Citizens National Bank and Trust company, has called a meeting for Monday of the clearing house members to determine which time banks will follow.

Richland county commissioners announced today that since the county is an integral part of the state the new time will be followed as an accommodation to farmers who fought for the change to gain more daylight working time.

Mayor W. J. Locke, personally favoring retention of the war time since the seasonal change makes for earlier daylight regardless of clock shifting, has asked City Solicitor Leslie K. Wagner for a ruling whether or not a special session of council will be required to decide the issue or whether the legislature's action makes municipal compliance mandatory. Locke favored the change last fall as a benefit to school

War Gases Bring Tears to Eyes of Defense Workers

Tears flowed in Mansfield late yesterday and last night when war gases afflicted scores of persons—and similar "suffering" is scheduled for tonight in John Simpson auditorium.

Cause of the tears and choking accompaniment was gas chamber demonstrations conducted by officers of the Ohio State Guard for instruction of Company F members and civilian defense corpsmen.

Nearly 1,000 participated in the 5 p. m. field exercises at the Ashland road armory, the 7 p. m. drill of Company F at the armory and the 7:30 session at the auditorium. Admission was by military or civilian defense identification only, and the same restriction will be in force tonight but Thursday night's session at Simpson will be open to the public.

At yesterday's field demonstration, tear gas was employed in the chambers mounted on mobile units supplied by the state guard. Masks were worn in some phases of the test and discarded in others. At the

British Move; Axis Reports Own Offense

Announcements Indicate Clash Near Mareth Line as U. S. Fliers Rake Foe at Kairouan; Kharkov Defenses Are Crumbling.

BULLETIN

CAIRO—(U.P.)—The time is imminent when all warfare in Africa will be merged into one big battle for the control of Tunisia, Gen. Sir Harold R. L. G. Alexander, British commander for the Middle East, said at a press conference today.

(By Associated Press)

Britain's victorious Eighth army was officially reported to have started a new advance into Tunisia today, breaking a protracted lull, and at the same time the German-controlled Vichy radio asserted Axis Tunisian forces had launched an attack against the British.

The Vichy broadcast said the Axis assault was made to forestall a British offensive.

First word of the British advance came from Gen. Sir. Harold R. L. G. Alexander, British commander in chief in the Middle East, who told newsmen:

"The enemy's forces have been completely eliminated from Egypt, Cirenaica, Libya and Tripolitania—and the Eighth army is advancing."

For several days, Axis quarters have reported Gen. Sir. Bernard L. Montgomery's armies were massing troops, tanks, big guns and other equipment along the Libyan-Tunisian frontier for a new offensive.

Advance Eighth army troops were reported to have thrust 60 miles across the border several days ago.

Vichy's report of an Axis counter-attack indicated Col.-Gen. Jurgen von Arnim's Tunisian forces might have reinforced Nazi Field Marshal Erwin Rommel's battered legions and turned on the British Eighth army somewhere in the vicinity of the Mareth line, 60 miles inside Tunisia.

Lieut.-Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's headquarters reported a new combination of U. S. Airacobras and American-flown Spitfires raked Axis forces on the southern Tunisian front with cannon and machine-gun fire, while U. S. Flying Fortresses blasted the German air base near Kairouan.

An Italian communique said the raiders inflicted many casualties at Kairouan and asserted that 16 Allied planes were shot down by German fighters.

Other Allied fliers pounded the important port of Palermo, in Sicily, and attacked the Calabrian coast on the southern tip of Italy.

On the Soviet front, German defenses on the outer approaches to Kharkov were reported crumbling today as Russian shock troops stormed toward the great Ukraine steel city from three sides after smashing through major barriers at Belgorod and Shebekino, respectively 50 and 40 miles to the northeast.

Other Red army columns were driving against the Soviet "Pittsburgh" from Balakleya, 40 miles southeast, and from Urazova, 75 miles east.

With Kharkov retaken, the Russians would be in a position to sweep back to the Dnieper river in the heart of the Ukraine.

Other developments in the global conflict:

FAR PACIFIC—A U. S. Navy spokesman at a South seas base announced Japanese troops on Guadalcanal island, in the Solomons, had been "completely eliminated" and intimated a new Allied offensive was near.

"We are now going to take offensive action in which the complete seizure of Guadalcanal has an important part," said the spokesman, Capt. Myles Browning, chief of the staff of Admiral William F. Halsey, jr.

Two likely directions for an Allied drive would be northwest through the Solomons toward the big Japanese base at Rabaul, New

Japs Lose 90,000 Men, 2,000 Planes In South Pacific War

(By United Press)

HEADQUARTERS UNITED STATES PACIFIC FLEET, PEARL HARBOR—Japan lost 90,000 men killed, 200 ships sunk or damaged and 2,000 planes destroyed in its first great defeats of the war on Guadalcanal island and in New Guinea, well-informed quarters estimated today at this nerve center of the Pacific theater.

In the southern Solomons alone, it was estimated, Japan lost about 15,000 men killed, 150 ships sunk or damaged and more than 1,000 planes destroyed. The remainder of the losses were suffered in the New Guinea campaign.

The United States naval, marine, air and army forces suffered painful losses. But they were relatively light and throughout the campaign the American forces were outnumbered.

The United States forces at sea and on land won their victory with a minimum of ships and men and equipment. Recent reports indicated that the naval forces were now being strengthened rapidly. A United Press dispatch reported that new guns, new ships, new planes and more and more supplies were going in and that more were on the way.

The Solomons campaign actually began last May when a force of United States carrier planes sank 11 Japanese warships, transports and cargo vessels at Tulagi harbor, just north of Guadalcanal. This was the first phase of the battle of the Coral sea in which Japan suffered a big defeat.

Here Are the Four Top-Flight Columnists Who Appear In The News-Journal Starting Today

DREW PEARSON

ALL the ballyhoo of Washington is as familiar to Drew Pearson as Mansfield's Main street is to a bus driver. Through his years of reporting capital affairs he knows who makes news and why—and his previews of things to come and diagnoses of developments set a high point in American journalism. He presents convincing portraits of national and foreign affairs, interprets them clearly and sketches facts authentically. He knows and tells you who's back of it all, what the underlying influences are on every issue. He knows people in the high places and he is at home with those of ordinary circumstances and brings the two together in the Washington Merry-Go-Round. Pearson knows foreign issues and maintains contacts abroad which afford him "tips" oftentimes ahead of official advice to Washington.

ONCE upon a time only the farmer reader followed the clear cut, candid statements of Raymond Clapper. Today a mighty public comprising all classes of readers recognize his ability to divine events of political nature. Statesmen in Washington and over the world listen to his wisdom. The yardstick of common sense and fact is the measure of his expression. This amiable Kansan knows people, politics and reactions of one to the other and invariably his analysis of any issue, national or global, is thoroughly reliable. You'll enjoy reading his column today and the others that will follow. Clapper is conversant with the ways of the U. S. senate, the cabinet and foreign envoys who keep close contact with American domestic affairs; likewise, through travel he is thoroughly familiar with theirs, too.

RAYMOND CLAPPER

ERNIE PYLE

NO REPORTER gets around like Ernie Pyle. He rambles all over the map just to see what its like—the byways and the highways where the race of men go by. Graphically he tells you what you'll find if you ever get into out-of-the-way places. He can discover wonders you pass and never see in Mansfield or London, Pittsburgh or Kokomo. Pyle has a high sense of humor and a friendly manner of expression. Some day he'll be writing to you from Tokyo, no doubt, for he has a knack of getting where things are "hot." You'll want to read Pyle's today's column, written from the actual scene where Britons and Americans are pursuing Nazi-Italians in Tunisia. Doomed to stay at home, you'll enjoy almost as much as if you were by his side, the travelogs compiled from day to day in the far corners of the world.

A WILLING fighter but a fair one, Westbrook Pegler stands in the front rank of American journalism as a shrewd and sure reporter, a fiery and brilliant commentator. He sees things clearly, defines or describes them fearlessly and never is lacking in courage to state the facts. Racketeers know the sting of his satire, wrongdoers the barb in his truths, doers of good readily win his droll praise. You'll cheer the force of his words which you'll find in his daily column which begins today and you'll eagerly await each issue of Westbrook Pegler's "Fair Enough." Starting his career by winning national acclaim as a sports analyst, Pegler's probing and dissecting ability "drafted" him for treatment of subjects of a more general or universal interest.

News-Journal Page For Women

Refuse to Let Older Women Work

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

What happens when an irresistible force meets an immovable body? Today's immovable body seems to be a masculine prejudice in some quarters against employing women beyond flapper age for defense work. The irresistible force is the determination of women of all ages to work and help in the war.

It's only fair to say that men were subjected to the same prejudice a couple of years ago, when industry seemed opposed to employing men a trifle beyond shaving age. But this is ladies' day.

Literally hundreds of letters have come to this column from women in their early forties, who've been refused jobs when they have given their correct ages. Of course, the potentates who run them down were neither juveniles nor streamlined.

The age range of employable women came up at Mrs. Roosevelt's press conference when Marguerite Hickey of the women's advisory committee, War Manpower Commission, pointed out that there were two difficulties to be overcome, before all women would be of value in the war effort — the hiring in defense industries of older women and of those who have never worked outside the home.

A reporter asked Miss Hickey what age, generally speaking, was regarded women as unemployable in industry. Looking about the conference hesitantly, Miss Hickey said: "About 40." Few of the newspaper women present could claim to be much under this age of senility and decrepitude.

And there sat Mrs. Roosevelt who gleefully admits to being 58. Where is there a man who can keep up with her? Captains and kings, prime ministers, nobility, industry and clergy, visiting firemen fall by the wayside while she keeps going. Her day may start shaking hands with a couple hundred—then a plane to somewhere, a luncheon, speeches. Back time to see a potentate lay a wreath on the tomb of the Unknown Soldier. Meanwhile, gasping gentlemen are "spelled" by important understudies on these Lady marathons. All this at 58 years.

And Clare Boothe, our latest Congresswoman. Gentlemen, on the Hill are shaking in their boots at the thought of crossing swords with her. She wrote, you remember, "The Woman" that was all, and several more plays that told a-plenty. Clare is an author, but beauty. And 39 years old.

Mrs. Borden Harriman, past 70, has a magnificent account of herself when the barbarians overran Norway. As our minister, she helped Americans out of danger zones, and went 27 hours without food or sleep.

Women of conspicuous achievement long past 40 could be named by the thousands. The one remedy for this silly over-40 prejudice is for them to join the Sapphira club and not state their ages on the dotted line. As we are living in an age of synthetic beauty, multitudes of women get under the permanent wire at 40, and deluded men never know the difference.

HOLLYWOOD

—By Robbin Coons

HOLLYWOOD — Sir Cedric Hardwicke, a very droll fellow, had always been curious about producers. He had suspected privately of course, that producing was a racket.

The distinguishing feature of this racket in Sir Cedric's estimate, was that the racketeer sat at a big desk with buttons to push and a secretary outside to keep people out while he pushed them. But then!

Coons

Sir Cedric (who likes to be called "Mr. Hardwicke" or "Cedric") became one. A producer, in a private office, with buttons to push and a secretary outside to keep people out while he pushed them.

"So I pushed the buttons and what happened? Nothing. As for the secretary," he relates now, "I didn't know what to do with her."

Sir Cedric—aw, let's call him Mr. Hardwicke—does not consider his experience typical. He is only happy that he has been restored to the ranks of full-time actors, and that the film for which he served as producer, "Forever and a Day," is on its way to the Allied World's projection machines.

"Forever and a Day" took that long to make. Well, not quite. But two years was long enough. Plenty long for Mr. Hardwicke's button-pushing finger, which is still sore. Of the results, Mr. Hardwicke opines dryly: "I will now give you some producer talk. It is the greatest picture ever made. It is so colossal that I am now being measured for cigars."

You've doubtless heard of the film already. It's a picture "contributed" by British film colonists for war charity. Financed and distributed by RKO, it has an all-star, mostly British cast, all-star direction, and represents the work of 50 writers. All worked free. Profits in each country where it is shown will go to charities in that country. Alfred Hitchcock, Edmund Goulding and Hardwicke became a sort of producing committee, and sequences in a necessarily episodic story were directed by Herbert Wilcox, Victor Saville, Rene Clair, Goulding, Frank Lloyd, Robert Stevenson and Hardwicke.

I've seen the film, which is the story of a London home from its erection in 1804 through the London blitz, and can recommend it as decidedly worthy of attention, particularly the Ida Lupino-Brian Aherne sequence and the 1917 sequence with Merle Oberon, Robert Cummings, Roland Young, Gladys Cooper et als. Part of the film's appeal is novelty — seeing fellows like Victor McLaglen, Charles Laughton, Herbert Marshall and the like playing bits.

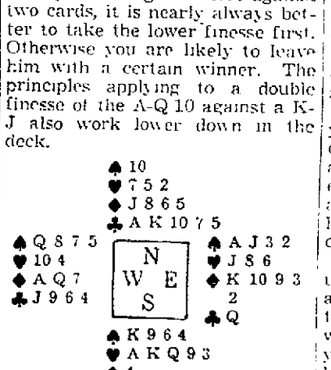
"The Authority on Authorities"

FINESSE LOW ENOUGH

If you decide to play a particular opponent for all the outstanding cards of a suit, it will pay you to examine the situation a bit before finessing against the highest one. If your study shows the possibility of having to finesse against two cards, it is nearly always better to take the lower finesse first. Otherwise you are likely to leave him with a certain winner. The principles applying to a double finesse of the A-Q 10 against a K-J also work lower down in the deck.



(Dealer East. Neither side vulnerable.)

East	South	West	North
Pass	1 ♥	Pass	2 ♣
2 ♦	2 ♥	Pass	3 ♥
Pass	4 ♥

Disregarding his partner's diamond bid West led his spade 5, the A winning and the heart 6 coming back to the A. Reading the lead as from exactly four, South decided to ruff out his spades. He cashed the K, ruffed the 6 with the heart 5 and led the diamond 8 to the 9 and Q. West took out dummy's last trump with the 10 to the K. Seeing that he could not ruff his last spade, South decided to try to bring in the whole club suit.

Reckoning that the best chance to do this was to find East with a singleon Q or J, he led to the club K and was pleased when the Q fell. He came to his own hand with a ruff of the diamond 5 by the heart 9, dropped East's last trump with the Q, then finessed the club 10. He realized now, too late, that he should have led the 8 and finessed it if West failed to cover, and if he did cover with the 9, come up with the 10. That would have enabled him to finesse against the J next and thus make an extra trick.

But, when he won that trick with the 10, he had no way left to shut out both tre J and 9. When West scored with his J, South discarded his last spade, but lost all chance for an extra trick.

Realities Facing Parents

By GARRY C. MYERS, Ph. D.

We who write columns and books and give public addresses on desirable ways of bringing up the child and cultivating happy family relationships really want to help parents attain these ends. Yet an occasional parent who reads what we write or listens to what we say, is harmed more than helped.

Perhaps we experts have been at fault in not warning parents against taking things they read or hear too literally, against taking them without considering the circumstances under which these points must work. Too often, we write and speak as if everything had been ideal up to now.

Parents need to face realities. Not what you are sure is desirable, but what you can accomplish with a reasonable expenditure of vexation to you and others concerned should be your guide.

Suppose you must live with the grandparents of your children and suppose these grandparents always have bossed you and your husband. So long as you are living with them there will be some goals you might as well not try to attain. Better to let such matters go by as not reasonably attainable, than to fret and fume and make you and your child and all the rest miserable and still not attain these goals.

Suppose you have a husband whose views or ways concerning your child or children are in constant conflict with yours. You probably should just give up unless you can win your husband first to your views and ways.

Or, suppose the family set up or program is such that your adolescent youth has grown impudent, uncooperative or openly defiant and all your efforts so far have failed. Sit down then, father and mother, to take stock, trying to ascertain what controls and cooperations you can effect and what you cannot.

Make up your mind not to go on with vain and ever increasing irritations between you and the youth, with him growing still worse. Better to let him go his way with your companionship and love than to have him go his way to your discouragement.

Anyway, your most hopeful means is through more love and understanding on your part and more emphasis by you on his strengths and less on his weaknesses.

Q. My baby 20 months old says only a few words and will never say a word when we urge him.

A. Quit urging him to talk. As you do things for him or with him constantly talk about what you are doing. Read some to him every day. Get him with a child a bit older who talks well. Also have his hearing checked by a specialist.

Q. You are constantly warning us against letting our children do as they please and advising us to teach them the meaning of No when they are little. Why don't you write something to show us how to go about it so as to get good results?

A. I have tried to do just this in my special bulletin, "How To Teach Tot Meaning of NO," to be had by writing me in care of this paper enclosing a self-addressed envelope with a three-cent stamp on it. Another bulletin of mine which should be read along with this one is "Stubbornness."

DOTSON SPEAKS TO GALION J. A. C.

GALION — Harry Dotson of Ashland, a state vice president, was guest speaker for a dinner-meeting of the Galion Junior Chamber of Commerce at Hotel Talbott Tuesday night. He stressed the importance of keeping up the membership of the Jaycees although many of the members are now serving in the armed forces.

During the business session, Roland Flowers, presiding, it was decided to keep members over 35 years of age as active associates until after the war when membership could be increased. Wade Stevens was in charge of the program, and songs were sung by Louis Girton.

"Pitfalls of Love"

(A Sequel to Marriage Meddlers)

By ADELE GARRISON

"Risk?" Georges echoed, and his voice held a frenzied note. "To be free again, to be able to walk the streets without fearing an assassin's bullet or being seized and carried to a torture chamber—for that I'd risk every penny of that quarter million. I can work with my hands, I even can beg in the streets if I am free. But what good is money to me when I have to hide like a hunted animal?"

Georges can dramatize himself, and he was doing a good job. It really was too bad, I thought, that Mary and Olina could not hear him.

"I thought you'd feel that way," my father said, "but it isn't necessary for you to impoverish yourself. You may have to lay out only a few hundred, but I'd like your authority to expend up to ten thousand dollars, if necessary."

"Anything, anything," Georges said excitedly. "I put myself in your hands unreservedly."

Impostor Described.

"Thank you," my father said gravely. "I trust I shall deserve your confidence. When the bank official comes, he will help us plan how to trap the impersonator, but first I want to find out a little more about him."

"Will you please describe this man on whom you are working?" he then asked the make-up man.

"Well," Halloran said, "in height, weight and general build, he's a ringer for King Georges, here. His hair is of slightly different color, but I have a wig for him exactly like the hair on the head of the king. His eyes also are somewhat different, but I'm fixing them up with a new process so that for a short time they'll look just like the king's."

"Did you ever see your client before?" my father asked.

"I don't know," said Halloran. My father controlled his impatience, and put a quiet question.

"Just what do you mean by that?"

Halloran Puzzled.

"I haven't been able to explain it even to myself," Halloran said slowly. "I don't think I've seen him, yet his face seems familiar. I believe I must have seen photographs of him somewhere."

"Photographs?" my father echoed. "That means he's someone who's in the public eye. Tell me, does he act like a business man, a professional man, a gambler, or a plain loafer?"

"I may be mistaken," Halloran said slowly, "but I believe he's an actor."

"An actor!" my father repeated. "Then you, so closely connected with the theater, must have seen him."

"That's what anybody would naturally think," the make-up man said, "but I know little about the theater, except in the line of my work. I rarely go to the theater or to the movies, so I know by sight only a few of the big shots whose pictures you see all the time or the people I've fixed up. This chap doesn't fall into either list, yet I'm pretty sure I've seen his photograph somewhere."

With a fantastic conjecture I went to my desk and began rifling through the contents of its pigeon holes and drawers.

"What is the address of the apartment where you are working on this man?" my father asked.

Halloran gave it, but it evidently meant as little to my father as it did to me, then Halloran added "I don't believe its his own apartment. I think he rents it just to have me come there. Tomorrow he wants me to come early, get him transformed, then wait two or three hours until he comes back to have me take off his disguise."

I turned from my desk and handed Halloran a group photograph.

"Do you see anybody familiar in that picture?" I asked.

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, February 11.

There should be excellent opportunities for attaining major objectives all along the way with little to impede progress. It is a time for pushing new and important projects to cherished goals and pleasant private relations.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year of splendid cooperation in pushing into high levels of production in their most ambitious objectives. It should be a time for aggressively setting the brakes in this direction. There may be much pleasant activity.

A child born on this day will be energetic, resourceful and ambitious for large experiences and adventures, achieving success in business and much pleasure in personal relations.

Tomorrow's Problem.

First Aid For Your Beauty

MME. QUI VIVE

Wishful thinking is a habit with the woman who fancies that some day she will find a magic emollient or lotion that will banish her complexion ills. Cosmetics don't work that way. They help a lot. All glory to the chemists who compound them; we number them among our good friends. But their products will not work miracles.

Beauty sorrows, especially wrinkles, are a long time coming.

Often we cook them up ourselves. I sometimes think we place too much dependence upon the items of the toilet table. They cannot brush away an appearance of fatigue. They can't restore the fresh bloom after a sleepless night or a wild party. Give them their due, but try to work with them. If you want to give aid to good looks aid, keep well, be cheerful and on your toes.

The lipstick has been a blessing. It is abused sometimes, but there are always women who go to extremes. While it puts the glow on the lips it also utrns on the lightng system of the eyes and the spirits. The middle-aged woman who is beginning to feel her birthdays looks at her crimsoned lips, says "Swell! There's life in the old girl yet."

The idea we are trying to put over is this: learn to use the paint and calcimine with skill and discretion but don't expect them to carry the load alone. Back them up with sparkling intelligence, splendid health and a promise to yourself to do everything possible to keep in tiptop form.

The good complexion is dependent upon many factors. Groceries have a lot to do with it. Too much fried foods, rich sauces and pastries will excite the sebaceous glands, cause excessive oiliness, may bring a dingy grey coloring. Lack of vitamins and mineral salts will produce pallor. Lack of water often causes the skin to become excessively dry. Simple fare of varied foods, with plenty of fruits and vegetables, is best.

The daily bath is imperative because it not only makes for cleanliness and freshness of appearance, but because it aids the skin in its work as an eliminating organ. Every rousing old scrubbing with soap suds and a heavy brush helps the skin to carry on its work and hustles up the blood streams.

Exercise, having a stimulating effect upon the circulatory system, gives good coloring to the complexion. It creates appetite, so all the little cells will be nourished. Every practice that keeps a woman strong and in good spirits will keep her young in appearance.

BRICKER COST TOPS DAVEY'S BY 25 PER CENT

Dems Spent $269,000,000 In Last Year, as Against $339,000,000 in 1941.

that helped to defeat him, and won office for Bricker, who promised economy and has since [illegible] economy and conservatism.

A comparison of costs of government under the two men develops some interesting differences.

The comparison is labeled by [illegible] research bureau as a "comparative statement of disbursements by state departments for the years 1937 to 1941 inclusive and budget estimate for 1942."

And it says in part, significantly:

"The trend of expenditures in recent years may be readily followed and can be compared with corresponding figures in the executive budget for 1943-44 when introduced."

That almost sounds as though the research statisticians knew what was coming for 1943-44.

Back in 1937, when Martin L. Davey was governor, the summary of disbursements of all state funds showed that Ohio spent $294,356,466.

The next year, with Davey still governor, serving his last year, state expenses were $269,234,588—less than for the preceding year.

In the election of 1938, Bricker defeated Davey and took office in 1939.

State expenses in 1939 were $292,305,204. That was more than $2,000,000 less than Davey spent in 1937 but nearly $23,000,000,000 more than Davey had spent in 1938.

In 1940, the second year of the Bricker administration, expenditures climbed from $292,000,000 to $319,138,320—an increase of $26,000,000.

Came 1941. State expenditures went up another $20,000,000. That year Ohio's expenditures were $339,817,296.

Expenditures in 1942 were not available in the research bureau's report.

But the fact remains that in 1941 Bricker spent $70,582,708 more than Davey spent in 1938—an increase of 25 per cent in cost of government.

It might be contended that comparing totals is not fair, since new departments have been created and expenses added, with their costs beyond the control of the administration.

But there have been some items that have come down—notably poor relief expenditures. In Davey's last year, the state spent $17,007,594 for poor relief. In 1941, relief cost only $7,547,655, a drop of almost $10,000,000.

In contrast with the increases listed above are decreases listed in the reports of the cost of operating some other state offices—notably those offices to which Ohio voters elect the officeholders.

For instance, the cost of operating the office of attorney-general dropped 10 per cent between 1937 and 1941, and the cost of operating the office of state auditor declined about 8 per cent.

Here are the figures of the research bureau on the office of attorney general:

Year	Expenses
1937	$256,162
1938	252,317
1939	216,508
1940	220,320
1941	225,908

And here are the comparative figures on the cost of operating the office of state auditor:

Year	Expenses
1937	$1,088,676
1938	1,031,703
1939	1,031,191
1940	1,079,532
1941	1,121,917

Thus, the office operated for three years under Bricker, 1939, 1940 and 1941—for less than it cost during Davey's last year—even though in no case was it less than under Davey in 1937. The record of the attorney general's office is even more impressive. In every year under Bricker the cost was less than under Davey's last two years.

TOMORROW—A comparison of highway department costs under Bricker and Davey.

Your Federal Income Tax

NO 33:

DEDUCTIONS FOR TAXES

Taxes are, in general, a deductible item in arriving at net income for Federal income tax purposes. In the case of taxes incurred in connection with a trade or profession, the amount is shown in Schedule II to arrive at net profit (or loss) from business or profession entered in item 9 of the return. Form 1040; taxes on rental property should be shown in Schedule B, while other taxes deductible should be shown in item 14 of Deductions. Taxes shown in item 14 must also be supported by an explanation in Schedule C) of the deduction.

The deductibility of taxes is subject to four general limitations:

1. Taxes are generally deductible only by the person upon whom they are, by law, imposed.

2. Federal income, war profits, and excess profits taxes are not deductible for Federal income tax purposes.

3. Taxes for local benefits, such as assessments for street, sidewalk, sewage, and other local improvements which tend to enhance the value of the property taxed, are not deductible except amounts allocable to maintenance or interest charges.

4. The tax must be a tax for public purposes. Charges for governmental services such as municipal water bills, parking meter charges, service fees, and the like are not deductible as taxes, but are deductible as expenses if incurred in a trade or business.

In the case of State and local "sales taxes," if the amount of the tax is measured by the price of the article sold, or by a sum per unit of the article sold, and is separately stated, the amount paid is deductible by the purchaser.

The Federal tax on gasoline is levied upon the producer or importer, and consequently is not deductible by the individual consumer (except that in the case of gasoline used for business purposes it may be included in the cost of the gasoline as a business expense).

Federal duties and excise taxes are in general, imposed upon the manufacturer, importer, or dealer, and consequently are not deductible by the consumer, or vendee. This applies to the Federal excise tax on automobiles, tires, lubricating oils, mechanical refrigerators, radios, and other commodities, as well as the "luxury taxes" on perfumes, toilet preparations, jewelry, and the like. It also applies to the tax on electrical energy, liquor, tobacco, cigarets, playing cards, and the like.

Taxes imposed by the United States government on the following items may be deducted: Admissions, club dues, telephone and telegraph services, safe deposit boxes, transportation of persons and property, use of motor vehicle or boat, and documents.

Federal employment taxes required to be paid by an employer are deductible, but the amount of such taxes required to be withheld by the employer from the compensation of employes as payments are made is not allowable as a deduction by the employe for Federal income tax purposes.

In the case of ad valorem property taxes, the deduction is allowed only to the owner of the property. Thus, if a man and his wife are filing separate returns, and the home is owned by the wife, then the property taxes on that home are deductible only in the wife's return.

State income taxes paid are allowable tax deductions in the Federal income tax return.

Rancher Says Nothing So Mean as Angry Bull.

BOZEMAN, Mont.—(AP)—Take it from Rancher Ernie Miller of the Elkhorn, who's faced 'em all, an old red range bull is the most dangerous thing on legs, not barring grizzlies, bull moose or any other sort of critter with a curdled disposition.

Miller, who has been run over by a mowing machine, shot eight times and twice dragged from a saddle stirrup, says an old red range bull of the west "will put you over the fence 10 times while a grizzly bear is thinking it over."

As the next most dangerous animals he lists the bull moose second and the grizzly third.

MUSEUM GETS APACHE RELICS

CARLSBAD, N. M.—(AP)—The Carlsbad Municipal museum recently acquired a collection of relics that once belonged to Geronimo, the Apache scourge of the southwest 60 years ago.

Included in the collection are Geronimo's beaded moccasins, moccasins worn by Geronimo's squaw; a pair of beaded boots worn by their son; a tom-tom, a head piece trimmed with horns and a rattle made of little gourds used by Indians to dispel evil spirits.

The articles came from Mrs. Parker S. Dunn, whose husband bought them from Geronimo in captivity.

TELEPHONE 4251-6

N THE CAPITAL-- By Ray Clapper

ASHINGTON—The new American commander of the European theater, Lieut. Gen. Frank Andrews, says his first job is to increase the bing of Germany and soften it up.

f were were just about six months ahead of re we are, the chances of laying Germany out cold in short order now would be very great. If we had the planes, the crews and the fuel to give Germany a Cologne raid every 24 hours now for a while, the state of mourning that took place over the disaster at Stalingrad would have to be indefinitely extended.

Clapper

Unquestionably Germany is shaken inside. The odd behavior going on there, the funeral dirges, the strange silence of Hitler, the frantic note in the e of the once cocky propagandists all add up home-front echo of the bad news from the le Russian front.

lo many strange parallels have occurred be- n Hitler's war on Russia and Napoleon's war Russia that one is tempted to think perhaps her parallel is about to be found.

after Napoleon won the battle of Borodino and thus opened the way into Moscow, he had the ians falling back and everything looked easy. strangely the French army began to disinte- e. Russian guerrilla warfare began to spread usion and to harass the French so that within weeks the victorious French were in collapse had begun their disastrous retreat.

The French had not been defeated in battle at all. At the peak of their triumph they went to pieces, and then were easily driven out. Tolstoy, searching for an explanation, thought that the French soldiers who had fought bravely and effectively to get to Moscow were suddenly, under guerrilla harassment, overcome with panic to get home. By the time they reached Smolensk, the French soldiers were sacking their own stores and killing each other.

Is anything like that happening now in Russia? For the moment, the news out of there begins to suggest it, although we cannot be too certain, for the Germans are just now back approximately to the line from which they began their advance last June.

But the Nazi structure is so built around Hitler's personal prestige that no one can be sure it will stand very long against such a national disaster as has overtaken the Nazi armies. We can be prepared for anything in Germany now.

Every bomb we can drop in Germany has double force. It does its physical destruction, and adds its blow to German spirits, low over the defeat in Russia.

The idea that Germany could be defeated from the air has never been seriously held except by a limited number, but it is accepted that a daily raid of Cologne size would so completely disorganize and depress Germany that it would bring her halfway to defeat. Russia now is doing the ground job. She may not finish it. There may be ground work for us to do before it is over, but every bomb we drop now will do the work that American soldiers otherwise will have to do on the ground later.

'AIR ENOUGH-- By Westbrook Pegler

ALKING to the office today, George Spelvin, American, thought as follows: Well, menuts ou, McNutt, because if you think you are to snag me away from the tender embrace y dear ones around my family hearthside so ve to go 'way off to some Golfasaken hole of creation to make steamboats and sleep in some triple-deck fleabag with a lot of strangers, and live on dogs and hamburger-rye well, brother, leave me ask you how does this affect Harry Hopkins because from all I hear he never lived so high in his life with a nice free apartment in the White House for he and his bride and the most dough he ever got and still he has the gall to print an article that we Spelvins will have to do whatever he and we can't eat this and we can't wear that use we are so short of manpower and how t all those foreign-talking bums down in Washn what they call them economists and they around and they tell congress how the only to defeat the aggressors you have to quit your ar job and break up your home but what those bums? Why don't they quit their and go to work?

mean if we have got to hire economists to he Spelvins what to do well why don't you ome economists that speak United States and alk like a bunch of comedians?

nd furthermore, McNutt, leave me ask you supposing I say all right I am patriotic and I will do my bit but I will be damned if I will pay $150 or even $5 out of my wages to any muscle from some racketeering union or buy any life insurance from them, so the racketeer's no-account bum of a no-good loafer of a chiseling son will get forty or fifty thousand bucks a year out of the premiums and I can buy the same insurance ten times as cheap a hundred places right here in town but I have to join the union because you say I have to go to work in the steamboat plant.

Personally, McNutt, I have not positively got anything against you, and maybe you are trying to do the best you can but if you are fixing to shove the Spelvins around why I might as well tell you to get down to brass tacks and stop poisoning the issue with evasions which only stifle the sap-rots of confidence because it is either one thing or other and if we are hard up for manpower, well, Spelvin is your man but on the other hand what about all those slowdowns wasting time and bums getting rummed up so they lay off Mondays to cool out and guys just stalling around army construction jobs because a carpenter gets fined, he moves a ladder so a laborer has to move it for him and you call that labor's gains so I have to go to Seattle or Bangor and eat in the quick-and-dirty while Harry Hopkins and his everloving, they get caviar and champagne wine and free rent and laundry and room service and still he has got the gall to be telling me has he, McNutt?

Well, like I said in the first place, menuts to you McNutt.

GANDHI STARTS THREE WEEKS' PROTEST FAST

Demands Complete Freedom; Government Declines To Accept Responsibility.

(By United Press)

NEW DELHI -- Mohandas K. Gandhi, emancipated, 73-year-old spiritual leader of Indian Nationalists, started a three-weeks fast today in the luxurious palace of the Aga Khan where he is interned.

Gandhi declined a government offer of conditional freedom for the duration of the fast. It was understood that he had demanded unconditional freedom.

The government declined to accept responsibility for any consequences as regards his health, it was announced.

Government quarters, reporting that Gandhi was not embarking on one of his famous "fasts to death" but hoped to survive his self-imposed ordeal in the interest of Nationalist rule, and would add the juices of citrus fruit to the water he intends to permit himself for the next three weeks.

"It is to be a fast according to capacity," the government statement said.

Gandhi, interned at the Aga Kahn's palace at Poona since last August, was repsonsible for the sanguinary Hindu home rule riots, announced his fast, effective today, in a message to the viceroy of India, the Marquess of Linlithgow.

Gandhi will be permitted his own medical attendants and may receive visits, during the fast, from friends approved by the government.

The weakened veteran of eight previous fasts in 25 years had been interned as a prime leader in the disorders which spread through India after the rejection by Nationalists of an offer of home rule after the war which Sir Stafford Cripps, now British minister for aircraft production, brought to India in behalf of the British cabinet.

'SCARE BUYING' FROWNED UPON

Nelson, Brown Declare Rush To Buy Clothing After Shoe Order Unnecessary.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON -- Nationwide reports that rampant buying sprees of clothing are following Sunday's shoe rationing order today brought frowns from Production Chief Nelson and Price Administrator Brown.

Both Nelson and Brown insisted that such "scare buying" is unnecessary. They emphasized that there is no current shortage of clothing, and therefore no need for rationing.

Supplies of wool in the United States, it was pointed out, are larger by several hundred million pounds than they were when the Japs struck at Pearl Harbor.

Both WPB and OPA denied that any directions have been issued to undertake a ration program for clothing, or that any machinery has been set up to administer such rationing.

"Continuance of overbuying can create temporary maldistribution of clothing stocks," a joint statement said. "Its only effect is to handicap persons with a legitimate need for new clothes. Such buying is contrary to the best interest of the war program, and is totally unnecessary for the protection of the individual."

DRAG BAY FOR 5 LOST FLIERS

Authorities Seek Bodies of Airmen Killed In Crash.

SAN FRANCISCO —(INS)— The waters of San Francisco bay were dragged today in an effort to recover the bodies of five navy flyers killed late yesterday when a bomber crashed and burned near the Alameda air station.

The two-motored craft left the Alameda base an hour earlier on a test flight and 30 minutes after takeoff radioed that one engine had gone dead and it was returning.

According to witnesses, the plane circled to land, but suddenly plunged into the bay a few feet offshore and burst into flame.

Raymond Welty is chairman of the committee in general charge, Mrs. Glenn Mowers is secretary and in charge of the mailing list, while R. N. GUARDS ESCORT FIRE REFUGEES

Former Inmates of Asylum Rushed To New Quarters; One Dead In Blaze.

(By International News Service)

EVANSVILLE, Ind. -- While searchers dug into the ruins of the Evansville state asylum for other possible victims, more than 1,000 insane men and women patients, made homeless by yesterday's blaze, were sent under heavy guard to other institutions today.

A special train of 13 coaches and four baggage cars in which cots were placed for 150 bedridden patients was provided at the request of Gov. Henry Schricker of Indiana who flew to the scene of the disaster to take personal charge of the rescue work.

Only one person, Mrs. Ida McClure, 58, a linen marker, was known to have perished in the flames which broke out in the storeroom yesterday morning and virtually destroyed the $1,300,000 asylum.

Another woman, Mrs. Claude Maxwell, 80-year-old supervisor of attendants who had been employed at the hospital since it was built in 1890, was missing.

Asylum attendants, state and local police and home guardsmen guarded the patients, many of whom were violent cases, in making the transfer to nearby institutions.

Wants Public to Rechristen Baby Named 'A. Hitler'

NEW YORK (U.P.) Joseph Mittel and his wife, of Astoria, today asked the public to select and finance a new name for their infant son, Adolf Hitler Mittel.

Mittel, an unemployed woodworker, "like the name" Adolf Hitler and registered it as that of his seventh child. Now he is not sure that it was a wise choice.

He receives $11 a week in compensation for an injury in an industrial accident. It is the family's only income.

As Mittel explained in his small four-room apartment:

"This name of our baby has been registered with the health department. I have made inquiries and I find that it cannot be changed except on court order. Now it costs money and you have to have a lawyer to do that. I haven't any money for this. Do you suppose the public will furnish it?"

VETERAN DEM THREATENS TO BOLT PARTY

Wheeler Indicates He'll Back Republican If Dems Pick Unsatisfactory Man.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — Sen. Burton K. Wheeler (D., Mont.), today indicated that he will bolt the Democratic party in the 1944 presidential race if an unsatisfactory candidate is nominated.

While many political observers expect President Roosevelt to be nominated for a fourth term, Wheeler declined to discuss personalities or possible candidates.

"While I much prefer to support someone of my own party, yet I am prepared to support any man whose first interest is the welfare of the people of the United States and our institutions," said Wheeler.

"By this I do not mean we should or could hold ourselves aloof from the rest of the world. We must help the countries of Europe after the war. We must cause our enemies to be disarmed. We must help other nations to help themselves and not try by force to impose our views as to economics, religion or politics upon people not ready or willing to accept them.

"We must not throw down the bars to cheap labor or the rest of the world nor tear down our immigration laws.

"We can best help by making democracy, Christianity and brotherly love work in America."

Wheeler believes that former President Herbert Hoover would be the strongest candidate the Republicans could name in 1944.

"I feel confident that Mr. Hoover is not a candidate for the presidency," he said. "While I campaigned the country against him in 1932 in favor of President Roosevelt, I do think that undoubtedly Hoover would be the strongest candidate the Republicans could put up.

"The question of who is president in 1944 is one that should deeply concern every citizen who loves the United States, regardless of party affiliations.

"The nomination should not go to some politician who merely wants the office for self-aggrandizement or to help a political party."

Hahn Scores 27 Points As Mansfield Downs Wildcats

Sport Podge by REX HESS

The Dale Haverstock case is closed.

There's not a bit of question any more about the eligibility of the star Canton McKinley Bulldog basketballer.

And the incident, which had all the aspects of a dirty scandal, now blooms as the funniest hoax story of the year in high school sports.

Only red faces left from the case are those worn by the typewriter tappers in the sports department of the Akron Beacon-Journal, which, a year ago, carried Haverstock's name in the box score of a reputed independent cage tournament in Akron.

Jim Schlemmer, sports editor of the Beacon-Journal, now discovers that the B-J sports staff was duped, victimized, bamboozled and hornswoggled by some publicity punchy kids.

After taking one Akron high school coach to task recently for even bringing up the question of Haverstock's eligibility on the basis of that "tournament box score," Schlemmer made a thorough investigation of the case.

And he now discloses that the box score came from a tournament that was never held.

* * *

Writes Schlemmer:

"Haverstock did not play in an Akron tournament despite the fact a box score of the Canton Paints, appearing in our paper last March 27, carries the name of Haverstock.

"That tournament was strictly a phony. We have collected written proof that a group of West Hill boys, playing at King school, adopted such team names as Cleveland All Stars, Canton Paints, Tall-Madge Parks, etc., in order to enhance their chances of having the box scores printed.

"Proof also is on hand testifying that Akron boys adopted the names of McKinley and Timken stars--Carnes, Coleman, Garver, Huddleston and Haverstock--in order to make the tournament appear more important and to help draw some people.

"From Great Lakes Naval Training Station comes confession of one boy who took part in the so-called tournament: 'We used the names of Canton players to help draw fans.' From a West High student comes written admission that the scores of those games were faked 'in order to make a certain West Hill boy look like a big star,' a boy who was not capable of being a star otherwise.

"From an Akron coach and from certain Canton coaches who were attempting to prove Haverstock ineligible, there is likely to come only heavy silence," opines Schlemmer.

Wally Davis tells you the story of last night's Mansfield-Springfield high school cage game, but I can't help putting in my two cents worth.

In something like 25 years of messing around with this bucketball game, I've never seen two teams as hot at the same time as were those Tygers and Wildcats last night.

In the first four minutes of the third quarter they had chalked up 14 points between them. And in the next two minutes they added 16 more.

And Dean Hahn's 17 points in the first half were something to see.

National Loop Buys Phillies

Holds Stock For Resale To New Owners of Club.

By JUDSON BAILEY

NEW YORK—(AP)—The question in baseball still is "who is going to buy the Phils?" But there is a new meaning today in the old familiar query.

Acting as a broker, the National League yesterday bought up the stock of its Philadelphia problem child for resale to a syndicate and thus ended a weary 10-year reign for gray haired, handsome Gerry Nugent as president of the club.

How soon the ownership will be passed along to a group of Philadelphia and New York men no one could say, but there was every likelihood that the deal would be completed quickly—possibly today.

League President Ford Frick, other club owners and Nugent wrestled with the sale all day yesterday at the annual meeting of the National League. Frick and the other owners had determined on a showdown and refused to be deterred by an alternate proposal of Nugent by which he would have continued in control of the club.

They had a bonafide bid for the club, and in order to transfer a clear title to the new owners, free of the many obligations that had encumbered Nugent, the magnates voted to have the league buy all available stock, amounting to 4,685 shares of the 5,000 issued.

Debts of the club have been estimated at $130,000 to the league treasury and $60,000 to others. The league assumed all of these and paid Nugent a specified rate per share for his 52 per cent interest. The best guess on the price was $12 a share, which would have brought Nugent $31,200 for his 2,600 shares.

This made the purchase price approximately $250,000, but "it was apparent that Nugent was greatly disappointed by the agreement. There were reports that, until the league proceeded last November with steps to force a sale, Nugent wanted this much money for his stock alone.

* * *

Soon after Frick announced "Nugent is out" the Phil president went to his hotel room and refused to see anyone. Much later when he returned to the meeting to sign some papers he commented, "I am going home and take a long rest."

The identity of the prospective buyers could not be learned.

Cagers Go on Point Spree

Ohio College Scores Soar In Tuesday Tilts.

(By Associated Press)

Ohio college basketballers offered a convincing argument today for followers of the cage sport who contend that defense is forgotten in the modern version of the game.

The point makers staged a terrific spree on last night's eight-game program in the state, the winning quintets averaging better than a point-and-half-a-minute clip and two squads chalking up new scoring marks. Three teams that fell slightly below the 60-point pace were defeated.

Collectively the winners tallied 526 points an average of better than 65 a contest. The losers total was 367 or more than a point a minute.

Topping the offensive display was Wittenberg with 88 points to Ohio Northern's 59. Forward Earl Fisher tossed in 31 points to establish a new individual record at Wittenberg. He held the previous mark of 32, set last year.

Findlay's Oilers hung up a new team point-making achievement in swamping Bluffton 81 to 57, at Findlay, it was Bluffton's ninth straight defeat.

Kenyon let loose for more than one and a half dozen baskets a minute for the first five this season and drubbed Ashland 61 to 39 for its first Ohio conference triumph in four starts.

Otterbein, Heidelberg and Western Reserve helped maintain the dizzy scoring pace, each getting better than 60. The Otters thumped Ohio Wesleyan, 66 to 47, at Westerville; Heidelberg upset Mt. Union, 61 to 59, at Tiffin, and Western Reserve trounced Baldwin-Wallace 65 to 37 at Cleveland.

In comparatively low-scoring games, John Carroll defeated Kent State, 46 to 33, at Kent, and Camp Perry reception center downed Toledo naval training station 54 to 38 at Toledo.

FIGHTING MEN WANT BASEBALL CONTINUED

SAN FRANCISCO — (AP) — Soldiers want baseball to continue, and they like to follow their favorite major league teams even though it's by transocean mail, concludes Manager Joe Cronin of the Boston Red Sox.

Cronin, returning from duty in Hawaii as representative of the Red Cross Athletic department, said he was carrying to Washington thousands of soldiers' requests that the game be continued as in normal times.

Sport Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK—(AP)—Wonder if Ford Frick's effort to get the Phils back on their feet will be as successful as his first big job as National league president . . . Back in 1935, if you remember, Frick stepped into John Heydler's shoes just in time to deal with a similar situation at Boston . . . He (or the National league) wasn't so gentle that time as yesterday's dealings with Gerry Nugent . . . Gerry, at least got some dough out of it but all Judge Emil Fuchs got when they took the Braves away from him was the bounce . . . But the Braves kept solvent and even moved out of last place, which was all the league required . . . All we can say for the Phils' buyers is that they must have as much courage as dough . . . And our understanding is that they had to show a good bankroll for expenses besides the price of the club's stock.

Bill Reddy, Syracuse (N. Y.) Post Standard: "The manpower shortage already has brought a change in plans for the three metropolitan major league clubs. They've discovered that ushers won't be available, so they're figuring on usherettes. . . . Good idea. If the usherettes are sufficiently good-looking, they may distract the fans from what's going on out on the field."

After Tulsa's football team had completed four straight passes against Tennessee in the Sugar Bowl game, a Vol tackle paused to ask Sax Judd, Tulsa's wise-cracking end, if they'd pass again on the next play. . . . "I'm too far out to tell from where I'm standing," Judd replied, squinting at the ball, "but if there's still some air in that ball, we'll probably pass."

Jack Johnson Master Boxer

Blocked Blows In Air, Then Counter-Punched.

By JAMES J. JOHNSTON

(AP Features)

James J. Jeffries retired unbeaten and bequeathed his world heavyweight crown to Marvin Hart who was soon whipped by Tommy Burns. To prove his right to the title, Burns visited Europe and knocked out every champion or near-champion he could entice into the ring.

But there was a tall and terrific Negro on Tommy's trail—Jack Johnson. He followed Burns half way around the world inviting him to defend his laurels. Burns finally sailed to Australia for a couple of matches and, to his surprise, Johnson soon turned up there. Tommy's afternoon tea didn't taste any too good the day he heard Johnson was in town.

They finally met to arrange a match and Johnson and Burns got into an argument. Burns became infuriated and threw an inkwell at Johnson but Jack ducked it. The arena was packed for this first world championship in Australia.

Johnson, the master blocker and great boxer, tantalized Burns by talking to him during the rounds, asking him, after each jab, if he liked the Australian climate and played with him like a cat with a mouse.

Johnson jabbed and uppercut Burns until he was cut to pieces but wouldn't knock him out. Johnson wanted to give him a licking and he did just that for 14 rounds, until Burns could go no further. The title passed to Johnson, the first Negro to wear it under the Marquis of Queensberry rules.

Joe Louis would have beaten Burns but Johnson, never. Burns was short and pudgy could hit and was fairly clever, but slow. I consider Burns just a little better than the Spanish heavyweight Paulino Uzcudun.

The art of blocking punches was the gift of Johnson. He could block blows right out of the air and then counter quickly, and if you weren't knocked out, you wish you were, for then you would be in for quite a bad licking.

His boxing ability was just the opposite of Louis'. Johnson was a keen student of boxing. He would wait for you to lead, if you didn't, then he would try to make you.

He was aggressive, wasted few blows, and when he led at you, he didn't miss. Joe Louis would be out-boxed, out-maneuvered and badly beaten by big, strong, clever Jack Johnson.

This first Negro champion was not as well advised as the second, Louis. Many mistakes were made, which were all blamed on Johnson. Louis had been perfectly handled. He is a great fighter and a credit to the boxing world and to his race, a man who makes no mistakes in or out of the ring.

ABRAMOVIC SETS NEW COLLEGE CAGE MARK

CHARLESTON, W. Va.—(U.P.)—Johnny "Brooms" Abramovic, southpaw basketball player of little Salem college, possessed a new national collegiate scoring record today.

Abramovic, who was turned down when he applied to Duquesne university, shattered the old record of 1,941 points set two years ago by Kenny Griffith of Alderson-Broaddus, and still has seven more games to go.

Baptists Lose To Lutherans

Fall By Wayside In Third Period Slump.

Baptists fell by the wayside in the third quarter of their senior Church basketball league battle with Lutherans last night at the Y. M. C. A. gym and dropped a 28-36 verdict.

Lutherans led all the way but it was a close game with the exception of that one period when the Bapitsts were outscored 4-12. Lutherans had only a 3-point margin at the quarter and half, 9-6 and 19-16. Poole of the winners got 11 points.

* * *

Central Methodist took a first quarter lead of 7-2 over Grace Gospel and went on to a 29-20 victory. Bair led the attack with 11 points.

Congregationalists held St. Matthews scoreless in the last quarter while chalking up 12 points, and that was the ball game, 31-20. Bancroft hooped 17 points for the winners.

The Saints, John and Luke, tangled in a real battle that saw John ahead at 10-5 at the quarter, and 22-17 at the half, and 34 to 31 at the third period. Then John put on a 17-7 splurge in the last period for a 51-38 victory. Nikolaus of the winners and Nameth of the losers each got 15 points.

Orangemen Again Defeat Crestline

GALION — The keenest of rivalry was evidenced here Tuesday night when a determined Crestline High school basketball team, smarting from a defeat earlier in the season, came to Galion only to be defeated again, this time by a close margin of 27 to 23.

* * *

The Galion High school Orangemen lagged at the end of the quarter 9 to 8, and again at the half when Crestline led 20 to 14. Tygers Rack Up 57-50 Win Over Springfield

Hoffman Hoopsters Cash In 10th Victory In 16 Tilts This Winter

By WALLY DAVIS

FIREBALL DEAN HAHN went on a one-man scoring rampage last night to lead Mansfield high Tygers to a 57 to 50 triumph over Springfield high Wildcats in one of the highest scoring contests on the Senior high court in recent years.

Following up his 22-point spree at Fremont Tuesday, the southpaw forward flipped in 13 buckets and one free throw for 27 tallies as the Hoffman hoopsters racked up their 10th victory in 16 games.

The Red and White cagers all turned in fine jobs last night. Little "Peanuts" Baker fired in 12 points and displayed some nifty ball handling; Andy Lamoreux was there for those rebounds and got seven tallies; the Myers brothers, Doug and Les, played steady ball. But it was Hahn who made the big difference.

The Wildcats held the Tygers scoreless from the floor for the first two minutes of the tussle and built up a 6-3 advantage. Then this guy Hahn started to click. He broke the ice with a side shot, cutting the lead to 6-5. Lawrence got a free throw for Springfield, and it was 7-5. Hahn whipped in three rapid-fire baskets and followed with another after Archer's side shot to give Mansfield a 13-9 lead at the end of the first period.

Mansfield built up a 30-22 halftime lead with a 17 point splurge in the second frame. Hahn got seven more in this period while Baker and Lamoreux each cashed in for five.

The winners threatened to pull away in the third when they dropped in eight straight points to take a 40-24 lead.

* * *

Hahn opened with a side shot and Meagher countered from under the hoop. Baker and Les Myers caged free throws. Hahn got number 21 with a push shot, and Doug Myers and Baker hit on a long shot and a side shot, respectively, to give Mansfield a 16 point lead. The Wildcats weren't ready to play dead, however, completing the stanza with a 16-point total.

The Tygers cooled off in the final frame, getting only six markers to Springfield's 12.

Rockhold scored on a lay-up and came back with one from the side to cut the deficit to nine points. Hahn hit on a push shot. Aleshire dropped one in from the side, but Baker hit from the same place for Mansfield, and it was 55-45. Aleshire parted the strings with a towering long shot and Lawrence made a free throw. Hahn called it a night with a side shot. Rockhold completed the scoring with an under the bucket counter.

It was the third time this season the Tygers have crashed the 50-point mark. They did it against Bellevue and Youngstown Chaney, and got 49 against

CHAPTER XXV

He stayed four days on the island. Nobody asked him any questions about himself; nobody except Bonnie showed any interest in his other life; or seemed to care that he had been away. It was almost as though they didn't know it.

He was aware that Bonnie's dogged pursuit of him was a matter for comment on the island, but there seemed to be nothing he could do about it. She continued to stalk him wherever he went. . . .

When she got him alone, they had two topics of conversation: New York, and Bonnie herself. By the end of his second day on the island, the two topics were merging into one, and Bonnie was saying, "Could I get me a job in New York, do you think? Or could you get me one, maybe, if I was there?"

Hobey thought resignedly, "Here it comes." He said, "Doing what?" and he was afraid she would say, "Imitations." But evidently he was safe on that point. Bonnie hadn't even thought of that.

"I would do anything," she said. "And I could. I can always do anything I want to do."

It had a cool magnificense, and a strange illogical ring of truth. "Such as what, for instance?" Hobey asked.

"Well, there's my looks," Bonnie said. "You said yourself I had them. I could do something that takes looks like mine. There must be something does. Or if there wasn't, then I can sew—I'm a good sewer—or I can even cook, if I have to. I could be the help in somebody's house. Maybe in yours," she added tentatively, with a slanting glance at him.

"Uh-uh," Hobey said. "Thanks, no. I don't think that would do, somehow."

"You don't like me," Bonnie stated flatly. She had complained of this before. "Why don't you like me?" she wondered aloud now.

"But I do. What makes you think I don't?"

"I know," said Bonnie. "I can tell. You don't even want to kiss me, nor nothin'."

This was not altogether true, but it annoyed him that it wasn't, because she was so right about the other. He didn't like her—he was never really to like her, in spite of all that happened later. She was monotonous; she bored him much oftener than not, and even her undeniable physical attraction he felt only occasionally and in flashes.

The thing was, though, that he understood her, and he was always sorry for her. She was so much like himself in some ways—she was the feminine counterpart of the young island Hobey, wanting the same things. Yearning with the same intensity to get away.

He supposed he ought to help her — after all, somebody had helped him—and whenever she brought the subject up, he found himself considering seriously the things that he and Ruby could do with her and for her. She had a way of saying or doing something that irritated or repelled him—and then he would think, No. Definitely no To hell with her. I can't be bothered.

So he came to his fourth day on the island, which was to be his last day there—although he hadn't as yet arrived at that decision. It was on this fourth afternoon that he finally succeeded in doing what he knew in his heart he had come here to do; he made the long walk down this island to Rosalie's house. It was two miles in all.

The path through the woods was shaded and steep, and he went with it mechanically; he felt as though his feet still knew it, every turn it took, and every rock and root and clump of moss.

The first of the long well-spaced line of summer people's houses came into view, and he walked until he came to Rosalie's. There it still was, just as it used to be, not changed at all. Behind it was the birch grove where she used to have her playhouse, and her swing. He could almost still see her in that swing.

"Darling," he thought.

He stood on the cliff path in front, with his back to the sea, and looked the house over; then he mounted the stone steps with the rustic log railings, onto the spacious porch. The first-floor windows and the French doors opening onto it were locked, of course—not that he tried them—and the glass was covered inside with drawn green shades, or with old newspapers. In one window the shade was torn, however, he could look in, discerning certain objects faintly in the inner gloom. Sheeted chairs and couches, a long roll that would be a carpet, open bookshelves full of books, and the vast stone fireplace at the back . . .

He wandered down to the rocks where he used to play with Rosalie when they were kids, and sat there, staring out to sea.

He did a lot of thinking. He faced his life, and looked at it—it was as though he stopped, and waited, and listened, having said to himself, "Now, let's see. Where am I?" He had a feeling that here in this place, here where the past and present met, the future would be clear to him, an answer of some sort would come. And it would have to do with Rosalie, and with his new professional ambitions—love and business, those would be inevitable elements—but he was groping too for something else, something he couldn't name exactly, but that he knew he lacked and needed. "Spiritual direction"—he supposed that was the phrase. He thought of another that seemed to fit, and that he hoped wasn't too pretentious. "Young man in search of his soul."

So there was a kind of desecration about his ultimate discovery that Bonnie had pursued him over here. She was inside the house.

He knew it when he looked again, because the shades at Rosalie's bedroom windows on the second floor were all pulled up—they had been down, and dark, when he last turned his head He groaned profanely now, and he thought with sudden resolution, that settles it. I'm going to get the hell out here tomorrow. This island isn't big enough.

He got up from the sand, still muttering, and remounted the wooden steps to the top of the cliff, and stood on the path in front of the house again. "Bonnie!" he shouted furiously. "Hey! Come out of that." He had to bellow her name several times before she heard him.

Then her face appeared at one of the windows, and he saw her hand go up to the latch. She tugged the window open, and leaned out. Her yellow hair was all that clothed her naked shoulders. "Wait, don't go yet," she said. "I was goin' to surprise you. I'll be down there in a minute."

"Oh, no, you don't," Hobey said. "You come on out of there—and quick. Put your own dress back on, and come along. It's getting late."

She vanished without answering, leaving the empty window open. He knew very well that she wouldn't obey him — she would appear dressed up as Rosalie. He was conscious of a fascinated curiosity as to how she'd look; a strong desire to linger; and yet a wary impulse to walk along and leave her, and not see. That would be wiser, and he knew it even then. But he waited where he was.

She appeared through the front door—he heard the inner bolts rasp, and then the door swung open slowly, and Bonnie strolled out onto the porch. His first sensation was one of definite relief because — in Rosalie's evening dress—she still looked like herself, and not at all like Rosalie. This was not the transmutation he had been afraid of, and had also, in spite of himself, hoped for. This was still Bonnie, no matter what she wore.

The fact remained that she was very beautiful in the black sleeveless dress, with the long skirt, and the narrow straps over the shoulders. She even knew how to walk in it, a show girl's walk, swaying sensuously. She had found some make-up, and her cheeks and lips were painted, and her arms and neck were powdered white. She was smiling at him. "How do I look?" she said.

"Okay," Hobey said laconically. The automatic word that came to mind had been "Terrific," but he would not say it. This was no time for any such admission. He added at once, "And now that you've shown me, will you please get the hell back in there and take that dress off and put your own back on? What if somebody should come along and see you?"

They both knew how unlikely that was; and Bonnie made a mocking point of it. "Nobody ever comes here," she said, "except you and I. There ain't anybody else for miles around—except just us So look, now—I'm going to do a show for you. I'm going to do Rosalie, like I did the other day, only in her dress—"

"That's what you think," Hobey said, between his teeth. "You're going to do no such thing."

She was closer to him now—she was so close that he could touch her. He did so, roughly, grasping her shoulders with his two hands; pushing her backward across the porch again. "Listen, now," he said. "I mean this. You get back in there, and get those clothes off, and stop this damn fool business. You've got no right . . ."

"I won't," said Bonnie, laughing and resisting.

"By God, you will!"

* * *

He picked her up, and carried her the rest of the way in. Once over the threshold, in the big dim room, he set her down; but he kept hold of her, because she seemed about to bolt. Her laughing, teasing face was just below him. "You're afraid," she said. It had a true sound, and a triumphant sound.

"Of what?" he asked her angrily.

"Afraid you'll like me. And you would, too."

"Listen," Hobey said, "you little —" He broke off. "I'm sick of this," he said. "I'm sick of you, if you want the truth. Go ahead and do your show, but there won't be any audience.

He let go of her then, and turned away, and started for the door. He heard her laugh—and it was Rosalie's little laugh. Three notes of music. "Oh, now, darling!" she said in Rosalie's voice, lightly protesting. It was uncanny, and it halted him and made him look around; he couldn't help it. Bonnie was still laughing, and now while he stood staring at her she came towards him once again, till she was closer even than before. Her yellow hair was tousled, and a single skein of it caught on the sweater he was wearing and lay brightly there. The silk dress whispered as she moved; and there was Rosalie's own perfume . . .

"Ah, damn you," he said to Bonnie, savagely; and with a sudden backward motion of his foot, he kicked the door shut on the sane bright world outside, and on the singing sea, and on the Rosalie who, after all, was nowhere here.

FIRST at the SECOND FRONT

LIKE the U. S. troops now in action, The Associated Press was thoroughly prepared for the Second Front in Africa—from AP headquarters in New York to the shores of Tripoli.

The Associated Press first laid plans and assigned men to key points months ago. Joseph Morton went to West Africa. Thoburn Wiant, Paul K. Lee and Don Whitehead flew to Egypt to join Edward Kennedy, Harry Crockett and Frank L. Martin, Jr.

When the invasion forces moved in on North Africa, six more AP men were along. J. Wes Gallagher, Russell C. Landstrom, William B. King and Noland Norgaard went from London. And with the U. S. forces which started from this side of the Atlantic were Harold V. Boyle and John A. Moroso III.

Thus AP newspapers could depend on a big staff for a big job—a big job well done!

STOCK MARKET TILTS UPWARD BY FRACTIONS

Many Leaders Advance During Early Trading But Few Hit Downgrade.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Many leading stocks took an upward tilt today in early market dealings.

Fractional advances were registered at the opening for Johns-Manville, U. S. Steel, Loew's, Montgomery Ward, Sears Roebuck, Standard Oil (N. J.) and Woolworth. General Electric and Union Carbide were among those slipping.

Holders of shares in retail businesses studied the commerce department report that sales of such stores last year, while at record levels, were only four per cent above 1941, the smallest increase since 1938.

Utilities followers found the output of electricity last week had dropped slightly under the previous week's peak.

SEES INFLATION GREATEST PERIL

Publisher Chevalier, Speaker at C. of C. Dinner, Calls For Rigid Control Steps.

the nation and at the same time serve as the breadbasket and the arsenal of all our allies. We are producing 24 times as much as we did in 1940—almost as much as the rest of the world put together. And the big question is: where to put our manpower to accomplish all this."

Chevalier said he did not know the answer to that one, but somebody must have the data on which to formulate an answer. He traced the present crisis to the nation's false sense of security in the years before the war.

"We thought," he said, "that the Axis could not marshall enough economic resources to be a formidable opponent. We thought we were beyond the reach of the foe. But the Nazis have taken virtually all of Europe and the Japanese have taken virtually everything they set out to take

"There is an ugly little Jap in every garage in the United States right now, telling you how much you can drive. And there is a Nazi storm trooper in every basement in the east, telling the home-owner how warm he dare keep his dwelling.

"In criticizing bureaucrats for our present troubles, we must not forget the real cause—the enemy," he added.

While we are enveloped in the maze of difficulties at home and striving for greater war production and financial stability, we must not forget that the war can only be won by fighting, the speaker insisted.

"We can lose the war on the home front," he said, "but we can only win it on the fighting fronts."

Giving emphasis to this point, Chevalier asked his audience to rise in tribute to the fighting men of the nation.

As one answer to the situation at home Chevalier considered the word "crisis." It is composed, he said, of two symbols—"danger" combined with "opportunity." Chevalier concluded by saying that post-war planning must be done by people with a sense of responsibility and by those who know how to create wealth for the nation.

Chevalier was introduced by C. L. VanDerau who served as toastmaster in the absence of retiring president Lieut. Robert F. Remy. President-elect R. M. Calene received the chamber gavel and outlined the four objectives for the organization during the coming year.

These, he said, will be to serve business and professional men of the community, to aid the war effort, to support all worthy civic activities, and to endeavor to plan ahead for the post-war period.

Paul Eliot, Richland county war bond chairman, revealed that Mansfield has a larger percentage of firms signed up for 10 per cent payroll deductions for war bonds than any other city in the state and that a drive would be launched today to enroll a full 90 per cent of the city's firms and make Mansfield the first "10 per cent city" in Ohio.

Novelist Louis Bromfield was introduced just before the principal speaker.

"Leadership," he asserted, "is no good unless you have something to lead. The American people are providing that something. It is the American people who are winning the war, and I doubt if there is any other community in the nation that can equal Mansfield's record in helping with the task."

Also introduced were Merle Pecht, president of the Retail Merchants association; Mayor W. J. Locke, Lewis Hartman, president of the Manufacturers club; James Eberly, president of the Junior Association of Commerce; John G. Routzon, secretary-manager of the C. of C., Mrs. Routzon, and Mrs. Clara Rust and Miss Opal Lindegger, employes in the Chamber office.

Ohio's Maple Syrup Season to Start This Month.

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Ohio, third ranking maple syrup state in the nation, with an average output of approximately 270,000 gallons, will begin its 1943 harvest the end of February. Sugar bush owners in all areas this year anticipate a good flow of sap and higher prices than usual.

Geauga county leads the state's 20 producing counties with an average of 94,500 gallons of syrup. Labor and equipment shortages in all counties, however, are expected to hamper producers in taking care of their harvest.

F. W. Dean, Ohio State university extension forester, suggests that producers pool both labor and equipment.

The man captured at North lake admitted, police say, taking a can of cherries before he was routed from the Reed home. Desk Sergeant Gordon Drury, who relieved Fair shortly after the Reed report was received, and Patrolman Earl Korn aided Captain Whipp in questioning the detained pair.

Police said today that the prowler who confessed the Reed home entry has been arrested before while the finger of suspicion has pointed at the youth who is being interrogated.

DEATH CLAIMS E. C. MARSHALL, EX-MERCHANT

Mansfielder, 85, Had Spent 10 Years In Hospitals; Rites Thursday.

Edgar C. "Rip" Marshall, 85, retired Mansfield merchant who passed the final 10 years of his life in Mansfield hospitals, was dead today.

Ill for 12 years with arthritis, Mr. Marshall died Tuesday at 9 p. m. in the Mansfield Sanitarium hospital. For a decade he had been confined to that institution and General hospital in a vain attempt to regain his health.

Born Oct. 9, 1857, in Bellville, Mr. Marshall began his merchantile career in a store there. He came to Mansfield 67 years ago to work in the old Sharp and DeForrest dry goods store in the square and remained in the city the rest of his life.

He worked from 14 to 16 hours a day at his first job in Mansfield and spent his nights in the store. He obtained work later in the Singer Hat store on Main street near Fourth and several years later became owner of the business.

Mr. Marshall joined the late James Reynolds in a partnership in 1905 and until 1918 they operated a men's store. That year Mr. Marshall retired, completing 38 years in business in Mansfield. Mr. Reynolds died in 1932.

Mr. Marshall was a charter member of the Mansfield Elks lodge and was active for a number of years in Masonic orders. After helping to organize the Elks lodge he was affiliated with it for more than 50 years.

He was a 32nd degree Mason and a member of Mansfield lodge No. 35, F. and A. M.; Mansfield Commandery Knights Templer, Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite of Dayton, and Al Koran Shrine of Cleveland.

Funeral rites will be conducted Thursday at 3 p. m. at the Finefrock Funeral home with Rev. David N. Roller, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, officiating. Burial will be in the Mansfield cemetery. Several nieces and nephews are the only survivors.

HELP KIDNEYS TO REMOVE EXCESS ACIDS

Try BEE BEE'S, a stimulant diuretic to increase the flow of urine. Urine is normally acid, but if some minor disturbance causes an undue temporary retention of urine, acidity will increase slightly, causing irritation or "burning" in passage. In such cases, BEE BEE'S, taken as directed will stimulate urine flow, and by dilution, will tend to reduce irritation. Try BEE BEE'S TODAY.

BRITISH START NEW DRIVE ON FOE IN TUNISIA

Axis Reports Own Offensive as U. S. Fliers Rake Nazis on Southern Front.

Britain, or to the enemy's northern keystone at Truk island.

Captain Browning said the Japanese had been driven from Guadalcanal with losses of between 30,000 and 50,000 men after a six-months' campaign which started last Aug. 7 when U. S. Marines landed on the island and seized Henderson air field.

Official reports also listed more than 1,100 Japanese planes shot down, 72 ships sunk and 11 probably sunk.

High-ranking enemy officers fled by destroyers and submarines, it was announced, but the mass of the 15,000-man Japanese army was either wiped out or taken prisoner.

Meanwhile, Tokyo attempted to sugar-coat the defeat with an unconfirmed assertion that Japanese forces had sunk 13 Allied ships—two cruisers, a destroyer and 10 torpedoboats—between Feb. 1 and Feb. 7 in the Solomons.

Japanese losses were given as three destroyers damaged, according to a Tokyo dispatch broadcast by the German radio.

NEW GUINEA—Gen. Douglas MacArthur's headquarters reported Allied vanguards were stepping up their offensive against the Japanese base at Salamaua, killing 100 more enemy troops in an attack in the Waumubo sector 35 miles southwest of Salamaua.

WESTERN AIR WAR — The Berlin radio reported RAF bombers attacked western Germany from a great height last night, but declared the damage was negligible.

On the Russian front, the Red armies were sharply imperiling three more big bases in the German 1941-42 winter line—Kharkov, Rostov and Orel—after their lightning conquest of Kursk.

In the siege of Rostov, where approximately 250,000 German troops and their satellites were reported strongly entrenched, the Russians said they killed 400 Nazis, crushed enemy counter-attacks and continued to advance on the Don estuary city.

Soviet dispatches said the Germans were battling furiously to keep open an escape corridor from Rostov to the Dnieper.

The Russian command said Col.-Gen. Nikolai F. Vatutin's columns driving south through the Kramatorsk region toward the Azov sea coast had beaten large forces of Nazi tanks and reserves.

Lorient Crippled; Marseille Readied

LONDON—(AP)—Naval observers estimated today the capacity of the great German submarine base at Lorient, France, had been reduced 75 per cent by Allied aerial hammering, but they expressed the belief new bases were being built, and mentioned Marseille, on the French Mediterranean coast, as the possible site of a new and powerful U-boat home.

Evacuation of 45,000 persons from the old port district of Marseille may mean, said these observers, that Hitler intends to expand the submarine facilities there to provide a great base for pack attacks on Allied shipping in the Mediterranean.

Although evacuation of civilians from Lorient is underway, observers said this does not mean the Germans plan to give up the base despite the terrific punishment it has been taking. It would be a difficult job to knock out the base completely since the submarine pens are under 12 feet of concrete and hard to find, they said.

Italy Admits Loss Of 27,000 In Month

(By United Press)

Italy confessed today that she lost 27,000 men missing and 10,285 wounded on the Russian front in January and that "the number of dead has not yet been definitely ascertained."

A German broadcast of a Rome dispatch, giving official casualty figures for January, said army and militia losses in North Africa were 449 killed, 592 wounded and 4,520 missing.

COMMANDS JAPS

Tomoyuki Yamashita Raised to Rank of General.

(By Associated Press)

A Tokyo dispatch broadcast by the Berlin radio said today that Lieut. Gen Tomoyuki Yamashita, commander of the Japanese forces that overran Malaya a year ago, had been promoted to the rank of general.

There have been reports that Yamashita had been shifted to another command, but the Tokyo dispatch identified him as "supreme commander of forces in Malaya."

Questions, Answers Clarify Order on 48-Hour Work Week

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Here is a series of questions and answers designed to clarify President Roosevelt's 48-hour work week order and steps taken already by War Manpower Commissioner Paul V. McNutt to implement the order:

Q. How will it make manpower available? A. Industries going on the 48 hour week will be able to release a portion of their workers, no longer needed because of the longer week, and make them available to other plants where there are acute labor shortages.

Q. Does it affect every employer and worker in the country? A. No, as of today it affects only those in 32 specific labor shortage areas. More areas will be designated when shortages arise.

Q. Does it affect every employer and worker in the 32 areas? A. Yes, including domestic servants.

Q. When does it become effective in the 32 areas? A. It became effective at 10 p. m., EWT, yesterday, but employers have until March 31 to bring their work schedules up to the 48-hour level.

Q. Can an employer be exempted? A. Yes, if he can prove to the satisfaction of WMC that a 48-hour week would be detrimental to the health or safety of his workers.

Q. Who might get an exemption? A. An employer who has been unable to attain the goal because of material shortages, and other causes beyond his control. But in these cases, the exemption would be temporary.

Q. What happens to the worker who loses his job because of the increased productivity of his fellow workers under the lengthened work week? A. He will be absorbed by plants where shortages exist. These plants are in the same area in which he now is employed.

Q. Is the worker released from a plant assured of the same wages paid on his old job? A. No, but every effort will be made to place him in a job which will pay wages approximating those he now earns.

Q. Can the government penalize employers refusing to adopt a 48-hour week? A. It can penalize the war contractor by cancelling contracts and by refusing him priorities for needed materials.

Q. What can the government do about defiance cases without using a heavy stick? A. It can use the power of persuasion and public opinion.

Q. Who decides what areas are affected by the order? A. McNutt, who was given the task of enforcing the order.

Q. What is the situation which will exist in the designated areas between now and March 31? A. Firms in which the minimum work week is less than 42 hours can neither hire nor fire workers until March 31.

Q. Does it limit a plant to 48 hours? A. No, schedules can be above 48 hours.

Q. How will WMC determine whether employers are abiding by the order? A. WMC officials expect employers will be asked to file schedules showing the number of hours worked by each employe.

Q. What happens if an employer has been unable to swing his plant into a 48-hour week by March 31? A. Machinery soon will be established by WMC to permit such an employer to appear before WMC boards and give reasons why.

Q. What happens to the earnings of a worker on a 40-hour week who soon will be working 48 hours a week? A. He will get overtime pay at the rate of time-and-a-half for each hour worked over 40 hours.

Q. Won't this tend toward inflation. A. Economic Stabilization Director James F. Byrnes says that "paying more for the same work makes for inflation," but that "paying more for extra work does not."

Lodge Speaker

Judge E. A. Phillips, Youngstown, a member of the court of appeals, will be the principal speaker at the district initiation session of the Eagles here tonight. Visitors are expected from Mt. Gilead, Galion, Crestline, Loudonville and Ashland, according to A. J. Eglesberg, secretary of the local order.

48-HOUR WORK WEEK ORDERED TO SPREAD JOBS

FDR, Aids Propose 'Freezes' and Farm Labor Transfer to Solve Manpower Tangle.

average 45.7-hour work week and that if all persons working over 30 and under 48 hours were moved up to the higher figure, there would be an additional 1,500,000 workers released for the war effort.

He said the 48 hour order would apply in designated areas to all employment, even where an enterprise employed only one person. He thought employers would have to report to the war manpower commission the number of hours each employe worked weekly. And he pointed out that current production schedules called for the addition of 6,500,000 persons to the nation's labor force this year.

No assurance could be given, he explained, that in changing jobs as employers adjust to the 48-hour week, workers will receive the same wages they now receive. But the commission will make an effort to place a worker in a job with wages as nearly as possible approximating those he now receives.

If the order produces a labor surplus in any given area, the commission hopes to place men thus released on farms in nearby areas. The commission — under which the selective service system operates—also will encourage former farm workers to leave their factory jobs and return to the farms, Harper said.

Revelation of this far reaching program to deal with manpower problems was accompanied by some evidence that enforcement plans are not complete and that officials are uncertain both as to how far they desired to go or can go without legislation in establishing a 48-hour-week for "all employment" nationally or regionally.

Immediate congressional reaction to the 48-hour-work week program generally was favorable. But whether it and other manpower proposals will ease pressure for draft-labor legislation will depend largely on their effectiveness and the completeness of enforcement. There were some demands, too, for revision of the wage-hours act to make overtime payment start after 48 hours.

The program was made public in three pronouncements, a presidential executive order, a directive by Chairman Paul V. McNutt putting the 48-hour-work week into effect in the 32 areas, and a radio address by Byrnes who explained the objectives of the order and manpower, wage, and anti-inflation policies, generally.

Byrnes said: "If some men can be drafted and sent abroad at $50 per month, every civilian must go where he can render the greatest service, even if it means less money."

Byrnes' speeches do not have the force of law, but his ideas that workers be put or kept where they are needed and that every civilian must go where he can do the greatest good are not basically different from the plans of those who propose to draft men and women for war and farm work.

McNutt's order drastically curtailed the right of employers in the shortage areas to hire and fire during the change-over to a 48-hour week. It orders recruiting of new employes to stop at once and forbids any discharges until March 31 when manpower commission authorities will authorize releases in terms of local labor market needs.

Although Byrnes thought business not directly reached by war contracts or otherwise merely might be "induced" to adopt the 48-hour week, the war manpower commission made no such qualification. In his directive naming the 32 cities where the 48-hour order was to be effective, McNutt said: "In those areas it applies to all employment."

The 32 cities affected by the order are:

Bathe, Me.; Bridgeport, Waterbury, Hartford and Britain, Conn.; Portsmouth, N. H.; Springfield, Mass.; Buffalo, N. Y.; Somerville, N. J.; Baltimore and Elkton, Md.; Hampton Roads, Va.; Washington, D. C.; Detroit; Manitowoc, Wis.; Sterling, Ill.; Brunswick, Ga.; Charleston, S. C.; Macon, Ga.; Mobile, Ala.; Panama City, Fla.; Pascagoula, Miss.; Witchita, Kan.; Beaumont, Tex., Cheyenne, Wyo.; Ogden, Ut.; Las Vegas, Nev.; Portland, Ore.; San Diego, Cal.; Seattle, Wash.

While the order is to take effect immediately in these areas, employment will be given time to attain a 48-hour week gradually over a period of several weeks.

William Green Favors 48-Hour Week

WASHINGTON —(AP)— President William Green of the American Federation of Labor favors a 48-hour week but opposes any additional hours unless absolutely necessary.

President Philip Murray of the Congress of Industrial Organizations declined comment until he has studied the executive order.

48-Hour Work Week Order All-Inclusive

WASHINGTON—(INS)—The 48-hour-week order is all inclusive and makes no exceptions for any workers in the 32 labor shortage areas where it applies, the war manpower commission explained today.

The announcement came from Fowler V. Harper, deputy commissioner.

"It affects retail establishments, the press, radio, transportation, personal services and every other known type of employment," Harper said.

One-Legged Man Wants To Know What He Does About Shoes.

LOWELL, Mass. —(U.P.)— The Lowell rationing board has appealed to Washington for help in its latest problem.

A one-legged man asked Chairman Thomas J. Fitzgerald yesterday: "Do I get one or two shoes with my coupon? I wear out one shoe in half the time a two-legged man wears out a pair. Can I use the coupon twice, or do I get two shoes at one time?"

children who have been compelled to walk to classes in the dark all winter.

Mansfield schools will conform to the new time. Postmaster H. E. Homberger said no change would be made at the postoffice unless new instructions are received from Washington.

V. H. Lodde, secretary of the Retail Merchants association, said "we're going to have to get together on the matter" but indicated that merchants will be regulated generally by the decisions of local industries to coordinate shopping and working hours.

J. H. Ashbaugh, manager of the Westinghouse plant here, said:

"We will conform to the new time as outlined by the state. We will operate the same shifts at the same times as we do now by merely setting the clock back one hour. This will introduce complications in dealing with other plants in the east which will be operating an hour earlier. We will differ with Washington and government agencies elsewhere and with army and navy offices which no doubt will conform to federal war time. However, we don't feel that these are insurmountable objections but they will not permit as smooth an operation and may cause some delays in getting information, especially if critical situations arise late in the afternoon when we might not be able to get a decision until the next day on account of other plants being closed. Army and navy officers assigned here are awaiting a decision but it is believed they will remain on federal time."

George L. Draffan, executive vice president of the Ohio Brass company, said: "We're going to wait a day or two to see what the attitude of other industries, mercantile establishments, and schools will be. Since the plant is engaged in war work I don't know whether the government procurement services will figure in our decision or not."

Most other Mansfield industries remained undecided today on which time will be pursued after Feb. 21, but likely will follow the leader of the larger concerns or a possible action by the Manufacturers club.

Mayor Frank J. Lausche opposes any time change in Cleveland. East Liverpool and Wellsville will remain on "fast" or war time with Akron, Barberton and Cuyahoga Falls being on record as favoring the present time. Senator Pliny Rogers of Grafton, Lorain county, representing the district including Richland county, voted for the time change when the senate yesterday upheld house action.

Completion of enactment was a great victory for the farmers and school interests, who contended the hour-faster war time hindered their activities.

War-time was established by congress a year ago yesterday, while the purpose was to extend the daylight hours and conserve electricity, Ohio power companies said their savings of current were negligible.

Some legislators have asked that Ohio petition congress and the interstate commerce commission to conform interstate commerce and federal agencies with the state's new time. The legislature has yet to act on their suggestions.

Dayton, Gallipolis, Lima, Piqua, Portsmouth and Shelby plan to revert to slow time. Apparently ready to change time but making no official comment are:

Cincinnati, Toledo, Youngstown, Washington Court House, Bexley, Bryan and Grandview Heights.

Tonight will be the "A" demonstration restricted to Company F members and civilian defense enrollees in which the instructors will describe aerial bombing tactics used for gas concentrations and the character and effect of different gases.

The public "B" demonstrations Thursday night will treat principally the methods of individual and collective protection against gas attacks.

Judge G. E. Kalbfleisch, defense coordinator for Mansfield, said today that gas masks for the Ohio area are stored at strategic points under orders of the Fifth Service command, for distribution to defense corpsmen in event of emergency. So far as he knows, masks are not available for public distribution, Judge Kalbfleisch declared.

Clare Luce Takes Bow, Hits Wallace On 'Globaloney'

WASHINGTON — (UP) — Congressmen hailed the advent of a new orator on Capitol Hill today while some snickered at the crack by Rep. Clare Boothe Luce, R., Conn., that "global thinking—no matter how you slice it—is still globaloney."

She referred to Vice President Henry Wallace's "global thinking" in her maiden speech as a congresswoman late yesterday. She was calm and poised during her first appearance.

The comely blond gentlewoman spoke at the end of the day. Yet more than 300 of the members remained after 6 p. m., to listen and applaud.

Mrs. Luce directed her verbal guns at Wallace's recent proposal for "freedom of the air" after the war.

Members applauded as she took the floor, in black dress, red scarf and red shoes. She wore Harlequin reading glasses—the first pair ever seen within the historic chamber, one member remarked.

At the conclusion of her 20-minute address, the members crowded around to offer congratulations.

JAPS LOSE 200 SHIPS, 90,000 MEN IN BATTLES

Estimates Show 2,000 Planes Knocked Out By Allies In New Guinea, Guadalcanal.

Japanese moved into the Solomons unhampered. Their construction of an air field on Guadalcanal, within range of United Nations bases and supply lines farther south, made action imperative.

The marines, supported by the fleet, moved in and landed on Guadalcanal, Tulagi, Tanambogo, Gavutu and Florida islands. The Japanese cleaned out the small landing forces in the last four islands, it may be said now, in the first few days of bitter fighting.

But on Guadalcanal, where the first landing was unopposed, seven months of fighting under frightful conditions of climate and terrain brought American victory, and the Stars and Stripes now fly from Henderson, the air field which the Japanese had just about completed when the marines landed.

Outnumbered, under-supplied, the marines clung to their foothold under savage air and naval bombardment until new planes gave the United States air supremacy and the navy wrecked the Japanese naval forces in a series of fights.

It was estimated that the Japanese had 40,000 troops in the southern Solomons, including the reinforcements they managed to land. Of these probably 30,000 were killed or captured, or are now trapped in small pockets on Guadalcanal.

In addition to the 60,000 men thus accounted for it was estimated that 15,000 were lost in a series of naval engagements and abortive attempts to land reinforcements.

U. S. Planes Sink Two Jap Destroyers

By WILLIAM TYREE
(INS Staff Correspondent)

WITH THE U. S. FLEET IN SOUTH PACIFIC, Feb. 5—(Delayed)— American planes have sunk at least two Japanese destroyers and possibly five others in a cat-and-mouse battle revolving around the strategic island of Guadalcanal.

Our fleet is out here—as Secretary of Navy Frank Knox puts it—and airpower already has scored the first blow.

Here is as much as can be told about the naval situation at this moment:

Twenty Japanese destroyers started toward Guadalcanal from the area of Buin and were met by American air striking groups. The American planes attacked and sank one Japanese destroyer and left three others burning fiercely.

That ended the first Japanese threat.

Yesterday a second group of enemy destroyers started south and was caught by long range American bombers. This time one destroyer was sunk and hits were scored on three others. Two of the three damaged vessels suffered severely.

Japs Blame Defeat On Air Inferiority

TOKYO— (By official Japanese wireless)—(INS)— Frank admission that Japan was defeated at Guadalcanal because of her inability to gain aerial supremacy over the island was made to the Japanese parliament today by Major General Sato, representative of the war ministry.

Discussing the evacuation of Japanese forces from Guadalcanal and the Buna area of New Guinea, Sato stressed the fact that Japanese air bases were more than 600 miles from the scene of action "while the enemy was able to obtain both material and labor power from supply bases situated near at hand."

"For this reason," Sato said, "it proved impossible for the Japanese to gain supremacy in the air over Guadalcanal."

RED CROSS FORMS ARMY, NAVY COMMITTEE TO RECRUIT NURSES

Organization of a recruiting committee charged with bolstering the enlistment of nurses for army and navy service was completed today by Richland county chapter of the Red Cross.

Miss Gayle Rife, night supervisor at Mansfield General hospital, was named chairman of the committee. Mrs. Milo W. Hieber will act as co-chairman and Mrs. Ray Donaldson as secretary.

A recruiting station in the Red Cross Production Center at 43 West Fourth street was recently opened by the chapter in an attempt to help Ohio fill its quota of 176 nurses a month and meet the demand of the armed forces for 30,000 nurses in 1943.

Every qualified registered nurse between the ages of 21 and 40, married or single, who is physically fit, is eligible for enlistment, Miss Miriam Hooper, county Red Cross executive secretary, said.

"At present there are only two registered nurses for every 1,000 men in service," said Miss Hooper. This ratio must be raised to 10 for every 1,000."

The committee set up by the organization will be in active contact with groups throughout the county in an effort to supply the chapter's share in the recruiting program.

Miss Mary Lucille Bushey of the Richland county health department will represent Shelby on the committee and will work in that area. Other members of the committee include Miss Faye Chamberlain representing the city health department; Miss Mabel Selfe, superintendent of nurses at Mansfield General hospital, representing the hospital, and Eva Lore Stauffer, representing private duty nurses. Mrs. Eugene Weinberger will serve on the committee for the speaker's bureau.

'BANDITS,' SIX AND NINE YEARS OLD, GIVE UP LOOT FROM STORES

Two bold, bad bandits—six and nine years old—played hooky from first and third grade classes yesterday to make pilfering forays in downtown stores, they told police who emptied their pockets of two knives, three steel tape measures, candy, price tags and other minor loot after their acts had been observed by a clerk.

Tears coursed down their faces when Patrolman Russell Miles placed the youngsters in custody of Captain John Miller. The boys finally controlled their sobs sufficiently to tell who they were—and to withdraw their first story of being "lost lambs." Then the "shellout" began, the "shakedown" search used on hardened criminals being unnecessary as one or the other of the youngsters would delve into a pocket and come up with another unpaid-for article.

They were smiling when Captain Miller, leaving for lunch, placed them in custody of Lieut. Bruce Friday. "You wouldn't like it," he asked, "if some boy came into your house and carried away one of your toys, would you?"

"I ain't got any and I wouldn't like it" piped up the six-year-old, struggling to hold back his tears.

"And we won't ever do this again" declared the older boy.

There followed some fatherly advice which both promised to follow as they were given over to a cruiser crew who returned them to their homes—and some not so fatherly instructions to the parents of the youngsters.

AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER

MANSFIELD, OHIO, WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 10, 1943.

"There are periods in a lifetime when it is more difficult to live for your country than it would be to risk your life for your country. You and I are living in such a time today. We must fight for our principles, our rights, and our convictions at home even if in that fight, the opponent is our own government."—Carl W. Ackerman, dean, Columbia university.

Chamber of Commerce Looks Ahead

RECOGNIZING victory in the war as the primary objective for the immediate future, Mansfield's Chamber of Commerce takes a long look ahead to the post-war period and sees the need for present planning to meet the problems of readjustment that will assuredly come when the war ends.

Last night's annual dinner-meeting, marking the thirty-second anniversary of the organization's founding, was notable in attendance, enthusiasm, and in obvious determination to carry through the year in full co-operation with all phases of the national war effort.

With a high percentage of Mansfield's industrial capacity now converted to production of war materials, and substantial increase in employment already noted, earlier forecasts of much greater industrial activity during 1943 seem fully justified, and concentration on matters having to do with the war will be kept uppermost in mind.

Mansfield's excellent record in the sale of War Bonds was emphasized at the meeting and the effort to gain recognition as Ohio's first "Ten Percent City" is given impetus by the fact that the percentage of local industries pledged to 10 per cent investment of income in War Bonds is now the highest in the state.

The address by Col. Willard T. Chevalier was in accord with the spirit of the meeting and provided inspiration for all-out action on the home front in support of the nation's fighting men, as well as stressing the dangers of inflation and warning of the need for intelligent post-war planning.

Mansfield's potentialities for the present year, and for later peace years, are great, and it is encouraging to realize that in the size of membership and qualities of leadership the Chamber of Commerce is in position to aid materially in transforming these potentialities into realities.

Time Change Declared 'Emergency'

NOW that the state senate has concurred in the house amendment which treats the proposed time change in Ohio as "an emergency," it will become necessary for cities in this state to do their own deciding as to what will be done in each community about setting clocks back an hour.

Approaching the time of year when an extra hour of daylight in the evening will have value in giving time for more work in enthusiastically endorsed Victory gardens, and with the present schedule in accord with national ideas of how best to promote war activities and conserve electric current, it seems the height of folly to set back clocks now.

Mayor Harter of Akron has already announced that no change will be made in that city and that clocks will continue to conform to the national wartime standard. Similar action has been taken in East Liverpool and it is anticipated that a number of other Ohio cities will do likewise, in order to reduce confusion to a minimum.

The bill, as passed, does no more than establish a time standard for official state activities and imposes no obligation on cities or individuals to change from federal War time unless they wish to do so.

If there should be action by the Interstate Commerce Commission changing time zone limits so as to place Ohio in the Central time belt, the situation would be entirely different, as uniformity would thus be attained.

It is being confidently predicted by supporters of the measure that Governor Bricker will sign it and that it will become effective Sunday, February 21—but maybe, as he begins hearing from opponents, he will give it further thought.

In any event, it is none too soon to decide what will be done in Mansfield about the impending time change.

Results of Parental Delinquency

THE PROBLEM of juvenile delinquency is becoming more serious locally, as well as nationally, and decision as to what to do in cases of theft, or other law violations, by children in the age range from six to early 'teens, is difficult.

Obviously, in instances of children aged 6 and 9, such as were picked up by the police yesterday as "shoplifters," blame rests on the parents rather than on the youthful offenders, as it is only by home training that children of those ages would be expected to know the difference between right and wrong.

This would also apply to somewhat older children, or even to adult culprits who passed through childhood without the home, school or religious training essential to development of elements of character that make for law-abiding citizenship.

In a community of Mansfield's size, with emphasis placed on character-building agencies, it would seem possible to have home conditions carefully scrutinized in all cases of juvenile delinquency which come to official notice, so that causes may also be disclosed and remedial action taken.

Russia Concentrates On War

HOW THE RUSSIANS are able to accomplish their incredible victories in this war is explained by Walther Funk, German economics minister, in a recent press conference at Berlin. He spoke of the Russian achievements with awe in his voice, saying:

> "There is no one in the Soviet Union who does anything that does not advance the war effort, or even thinks of anything not advantageous to the war. In the Soviet Union there is no homeland, in the German sense. There is only the front, war on all sides, war in every hut."

He applied the lesson to Germany, insisting that Russian thoroughness and sacrifice should be likewise applied there. He maintained that German needs must be cut to "the indispensable minimum absolutely necessary to the maintenance of life, and that "the duty of the homeland is to live only in order to work for the war."

Any observant American can see that this nation, in its war effort, is a long way behind the Russian willingness to sacrifice. Many Americans want life, leisure, fun and luxury, only a little less than usual. Wherefore the national war effort will last longer than it might, and cost a great deal more.

Halt Japan's Progress to South But Enemy Position Still Strong

—By LOUIS F. KEEMLE

JAPAN'S admission to having been driven off Guadalcanal and out of northeastern New Guinea is an indication that her southward progress in the Pacific has reached its limit.

It means that the supply line to Australia and New Zealand from the United States has been freed from the creeping menace which threatened it as the Japanese edged down through the Solomons. It makes even more remote the prospect of a Japanese invasion of Australia.

The marines and the army men who followed them have achieved their objective, which initially was defensive. Now with U. S. forces in full control of Guadalcanal, it should be possible to reverse the Japanese process and sweep northward through the Solomons to flank New Guinea and eventually drive the Japanese out of the entire Malanesian area.

American military and naval men have no illusions about the magnitude of the task. The Japanese are strongly entrenched in the northern Solomons, the islands of the Bismarck archipelago and on New Guinea west of the Buna area, from which they were driven.

They are certain to hang on tenaciously, as they did on Guadalcanal and in Papuan New Guinea. The Tokyo communique speaks of "withdrawal" from both places to operate in other theaters. In the case of Buna, the word "withdrawal" is a euphemism for home consumption.

THE Japanese did not withdraw from Buna. They were wiped out. The same is possibly true of Guadalcanal, where there still may be some Japanese stragglers hiding in the jungles and yet to be exterminated. As Secretary of Navy Frank Knox phrased it, the main resistance there has ended. It is possible that they got some forces off under cover of the naval-air engagement recently reported in those waters.

The American and Australian victories, while heartening, are a long way from indicating the beginning of an Allied sweep northward through the Pacific islands towards Japan itself. With the positions they have occupied and the resources they have seized, the Japanese should be able to hold for years unless their navy is destroyed in a great and decisive battle.

Some military observers, in fact, have insisted that Japan will not be beaten by a step-by-step island offensive by the Allies, but by attack on Japan proper.

The Russian successes against the German invaders in European Russia may be bringing the day nearer when Japan can be attacked directly.

Russia has avoided conflict with Japan so far for the obvious reason that she needed every ounce of her resources and all available manpower to stop the Germans.

German defeat would alter the situation radically. The Russians undoubtedly would like to avenge the defeat of the Russo-Japanese war and regain lost territory.

A Farmer's Diary

Home on Furlough

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

YES, the boy came home on furlough," the retired farmer said. "Ten months since he was here. Come clear from California, and walked in from the bus. Looks swell!

"His two married brothers and their families came over for dinner Sunday. We took him to Sunday school and church, my wife and I, and the in-laws prepared the meal. He walked between us as he used to when he was younger, but now he stands a full half head above me. I smiled when he stared down and said, 'Gosh, Dad you seem so short!' I been hoping these many years he'd make a better man than me, more ways than height. Reckon he's doin' it.

"In the afternoon we men all went down town—the two older boys, Don and I. Walking along, everybody we met looked—at the man in uniform! Girls who'd been strangers to him in school days eyed him and spoke graciously. My boss came clear across the street to meet the boy and shake his hand. A wealthy woman in one big house tapped on the window and waved. He used to carry her paper, as a kid.

"One kind o' sad thing happened. An old lady came up to Don and said he reminded her of her own boy so much. She hadn't heard from him, and her eyes were bad. From across the street, she'd thought for a minute that he'd come home to surprise her. Then she tried to turn it off as a joke—about her eyes. But I just thought with one family in every eight or ten sending a soldier now, we all understand that feeling of hoping to be surprised . . .

"Don talked about the change. He said it seemed like everybody belonged to one big family, the way folks acted. Well, maybe it took a war to teach us something.

"But the other boys and I kidded him something fierce. We let on we was all put out to not be noticed, with him along. We agreed it was Don's clean pressed uniform and snazzy cap that turned the trick—and he laughed and understood."

Looking Back

Saturday, Feb. 10, 1923.

Stock-selling campaign was in progress for Mansfield Wire Spoke company—8 per cent preferred, with common stock bonus.

At the age of 83, Jacob Laird, 171 West Fourth street, was continuing active as a surveyor.

Henry R. Endly sold business block in Bellville to Mrs. Fanny R. Paid.

Son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Troll, 15 Greenwood avenue.

Frank Carpenter's new book, "The Holy Land and Syria," was received at public library.

Birthday surprise party was given at Vonhof for Edward Remy, president of the Security Savings and Trust company bank.

Members of Primrose club surprised Mr. and Mrs. Chris Brumenschenkel, Olivesburg road, on their eleventh wedding anniversary.

TODAY IN HISTORY

February 10 is the anniversary of the birth of Charles Lamb, the essayist who often wrote under the pen name of Elia. His writings represent some of the finest literature in the English language.

Dave Boone Says:

WELL, I figure Mayor La Guardia of New York sure built up a tremendous radio audience for his future Sunday broadcasts by tipping off the public that shoes were to be rationed. "More rationing is coming Monday. I can't tell you what it is, but don't do any unnecessary walking" said the mayor, and let the cat out of the bag. Or, in this case, the "dogs" out of the bag.

* * *

Everybody will tune in Sundays from now on to see if Fiorello is dropping any more hot tips.

* * *

But the OPA is pretty sore at him for causing a shoe stampede and may demand that he submit his script from now on. If they do they can put the ensuing rumpus on a radio fight broadcast.

* * *

It looks like the mayor put his foot in the whole shoe situation.

* * *

Congress now has a bill to draft men and women from 18 to 50 for any job deemed necessary to win the war. I guess the era when the public just sat home and felt kind of sorry for the soldiers and sailors is ended.

Admits Navy Caught Napping By Japanese Fleet at Savo Island

—By DREW PEARSON

WASHINGTON—Vice Admiral Fred Horne, assistant chief of Naval Operations, has been holding some quiet blackboard talks with the house and senate naval affairs committees, and these talks have been a real step toward congressional-executive cooperation. Horne, by his frankness and willingness to admit navy mistakes, made a better impression than any other navy man appearing before congress.

Horne was high in his praise of our naval officers and men, but frankly admitted that the navy was caught off guard in the Savo island battle of Aug. 9, just after the marines landed at Guadalcanal. He said there was no excuse for this defeat; that a board of inquiry was now investigating; and there probably would be heavy penalties for the guilty.

PEARSON

Horne said apparently the captains of the cruisers sunk had not ordered their men to battle stations. He also revealed that an Australian admiral that night was in command of the "screening force" of cruisers and destroyers supposed to be protecting the main task force.

Horne admitted that the Australian officer and Admiral Kelly Turner, chief of the Allied task force, knew a Jap scouting fleet was in the vicinity, but didn't figure it would risk an attack. The commanders calculated that the earliest possible time the Japs could reach Savo Island was after daybreak next morning.

Therefore the Australian admiral left his flagship, the Canberra, and spent the night on Admiral Turner's flagship 25 miles from the scene of battle. No orders were given meanwhile to Australian and American officers under Turner and the Australian, and they were caught completely off base when the Japs struck at about 1:50 a. m.

* * *

Cornered In Aleutians.

ON THE more optimistic side, Admiral Horne reported the United States had sunk a great many Jap cruisers, and that despite the defeat at Savo Island we had been definitely superior in operational strategy.

In the Aleutians the Japs are so completely bottled up, Horne reported, that we probably could wipe them out at any time. Our submarine patrol has been especially effective in these waters, with the result that the Japs are desperately hard up for food, aviation gasoline and other supplies.

Horne admitted, under questioning by congressmen, that the Australians had not sent their troops to New Guinea to the extent requested by Gen. MacArthur. He also reported that co-operation between Gen. MacArthur and Admiral Halsey was excellent.

MacArthur, he said, had been sent to Australia at the request of the Australians, though the army wanted to keep him in command of Bataan.

Horne also made no attempt to minimize the seriousness of the submarine menace.

Shipping Wrangle.

A HEAVYWEIGHT scrap is about to break into the open between the navy and maritime commission on the issue of the navy's desire to take over control of the entire American merchant marine.

Very quietly, the navy has supplied certain members of the house naval affairs committee with information about the "subversive" and "undisciplined" conduct of American seamen on merchant ships, and at least one congressman has declared privately that the information will shock the entire country when it is disclosed.

The maritime commission, however, is skeptical, suspects the navy of feeding biased information to congress in order to take over merchant shipping.

The navy made a similar campaign last year, but was overruled by the president, who opposed any change in the civilian status of the merchant marine.

Latest batch of stories makes sensational reading. Take the case of the "Thomas Jefferson." According to the navy, this ship was operating in the dangerous waters of the Aleutian Islands when a U. S. destroyer came alongside in the early morning and asked for oil. But, according to the navy version, the master replied, "We can't give you oil until after eight o'clock; the men are at breakfast."

Maritime commission investigated the charge, found that the incident occurred not in the Aleutians, but in the safe water near Seattle, Wash.

Also, the master of the "Thomas Jefferson" had volunteered to provide the destroyer with oil at any time, but it was mutually agreed to move out of mid-channel first, so the two ships would not block the traffic. As soon as this was done, the oil was passed to the destroyer.

Capital Chaff.

ACCORDING to Hollywood Reporter, Sam Goldwyn is suffering from baby shortage. He needs a dozen or two infants for scenes in the Russian picture, "The North Star," but mothers in middle-class maternity hospitals are not co-operating as they used to. Prosperity is so general that these mothers no longer jump at the $75 rental fee for now-borns. . . . There's likewise a camel shortage, due to demand for North African pictures. OPA neglected to put a ceiling on camels, and their rental has risen from $15 to $25 a day. . . . Both staunch New Dealers, Senator Lister Hill of Alabama, has been panning Senator Claude Pepper behind his back. . . . Republicans are saying that the fact that FDR, at the Casablanca conference, settled vital matters of military, naval, diplomatic strategy without "Three Old Men" of his cabinet, shows how totally unimportant the cabinet is. The secretaries of state, war and navy—Hull, Stimson and Knox—apparently had nothing to say about it. . . . The Roosevelt-Vargas meeting in Brazil makes a prophet out of Thomas Jefferson who wrote a friend in 1820: "I should rejoice to see the fleets of Brazil and the United States riding together as brothers under the same family and having the same interests."

School Boy Heroes.

AMERICAN school children who collected scrap in the school salvage program were invited to name Liberty ships for the outstanding figures of their states. Their choices are significant.

New York children nominated Lou Gehrig above either Theodore Roosevelt or DeWitt Clinton. The statesmen trailed the famous ball player in the vote, so a Liberty ship was named Lou Gehrig.

Florida children chose Colin P. Kelly, jr., killed December 10, 1941, when he sank the Japanese battleship Haruna. Kansas kids choise Amelia Earhart, and Minnesota's favorite was "Mayo Brothers."

Lively Action Marks Battle of Tunisia As Viewed From Forward Command Post.

Editor's Note—The News-Journal takes pleasure today in introducing Ernie Pyle, popularly known as "the Roving Reporter," who is just now rambling around in North Africa and writing his impressions in a frank and interesting way. * * *

AT THE FRONT LINE IN TUNISIA—(By Wireless)—We drove our jeep under a tree, camouflaged it by covering it with limbs, and then walked up the side of a hill for about 500 yards.

Half a mile to the south of us the battle for Ousseltia Pass in Central Tunisia was going on.

We stopped in what is known as a forward command post, from which a battle is directed. This one consisted of a tent 20 feet square, well hidden under a tree. However, the whole tent had been dropped down and simply lay like a tarpaulin covering the officers' bedrolls and bags. All the work was being done around two field telephones lying in their leather cases on the ground ten feet from the tent.

ERNIE PYLE

The rocky hillside was covered with little bushes and small fir trees. The sun was rather warm. There were no papers or desks or anything—just three or four officers standing and sitting on a hillside near two telephones on the ground. One officer had a large map case. That's all the paraphernalia there was for directing the battle.

Our troops were on top of a ridge about a quarter of a mile above us. The enemy was in the valley beyond, and on a parallel ridge a mile farther on. We could walk up and look over, but we couldn't see anything. Both sides were well hidden in the brush.

* * *

EVERY minute or two our nearby artillery would fire, and then half a minute or so later we could hear faintly the explosion of the shells far away.

"Nobody's doing much damage right now," an officer said, "but at least we're getting in ten shots to their one."

Now and then a louder and much nearer blast interrupted us. When I asked what size gun this was, an officer said it wasn't a gun—it was enemy mortar shells exploding. I supposed they were three or four miles away, but he said they were falling only 800 yards from us.

Once in a while we could hear machine gun fire in the distance. A young second lieutenant stood near the phones and did all the talking over them. In fact he appeared to be making all the decisions. And he impressed me as knowing his business remarkably well.

The phone rang every few minutes. Other command posts would be calling in to report or to ask instructions. Now and then the chief post, some 15 miles back would call and ask how things were going.

Officers and enlisted men kept appearing from down below or over the hill asking about things. One sergeant came to inquire where a certain post was, saying he had two jeep tires and a tire for an anti-tank gun that he was supposed to deliver.

Another sergeant, wearing an overcoat, came up the hill, saluted formally, and reported that a certain battery setup was ready to fire. They told him to go ahead.

A phone rang. The captain of an ack-ack battery said the enemy had his range and asked permission to move. He was told to go ahead. All the conversation was informal and unexcited.

A phone rang again. An officer at another command post was asking for a decision on whether to move forward. The young lieutenant, apparently not wishing to give direct order to a higher officer, solved the problem by putting his words in the form of advice, sprinkling two or three "sirs" in every sentence. I thought he handled it beautifully.

Now and then the lieutenant would phone some other post. All the posts have code term such as "Hatrack" and "Monsoon" and "Chicago." I've just made those up as examples, since naturally I can't print the real code names.

Once the lieutenant phoned to a rear command post and told them to send some trucks to a town where two tanks had been disabled that morning. Several times he phoned other posts to check up on a colonel who was wandering around the battle area in a jeep. You could tell they were very fond of the colonel, and that he apparently paid little attention to danger.

* * *

THERE were no planes in the sky when we arrived, but that morning the Germans had been over and bombed and strafed our troops badly. The command post had called for air support, but somebody at the other end said the planes were busy on other missions and "You'll just have to grin and bear it."

The men around our post spoke cynically about that remark all afternoon.

"Grin and bear it, eh?" they would say. "Well, we'll bear it but we won't guarantee to grin."

But in the late afternoon our planes did come. First we didn't know they were ours, so we all took to the foxholes. Finally, after they had flown overhead a couple of times without doing anything, somebody yelled: They are definitely ours!"

So we came out. The planes circled for about ten minutes hunting for the correct spot in the bush-covered mountainside. They seemed to take their time at it, to make sure, and then finally they started peeling off one at a time and came diving down at a hillside a mile away.

They'd dive and then wheel back high into the sky and dive again.

Apparently there was no enemy attack, for there were no black puffs around the planes. We could hear their machine guns, and their cannon shells bursting.

They kept on diving and shooting for about 15 minutes. Pretty soon an officer came running up the hill and said:

"Do you see that? Those damned Germans are mixed up and strafing hell out of the Italians!"

When we told him they were our planes he said "Oh!" and went back down the hill.

"Double Duty" Desserts for Small Families

Desserts that do double duty as hot puddings one day and cakes or cookies the next are the perfect solution to the perplexing problem of what to serve the small family of two.

This rich date and nut pudding makes a wonderfully impressive dessert for six—elegant enough to warrant the service of your finest foamy sauce by way of accompaniment. And it is also perfectly practical to serve just as it is to only two.

The answer of course is that this is a dual personality pudding—hot, chewy and delicious as dessert and equally good cold in the form of small square cookies that continue to be delectable for a week or more.

Always get some of your sugar ration in powdered sugar. It really helps to make your granulated sugar go farther, for it saves frosting and you can also manage with less sugar in the actual recipe. For instance, the date and nut pudding would require an additional quarter cup of granulated sugar if it were not to be served with a sweetened sauce, while one tablespoon of powdered sugar is ample to sprinkle the entire panful if it should be cut up into cookie squares. This is a direct saving of three whole tablespoons of sugar.

Walnut Date Pudding.

2 eggs
½ cup beet sugar
⅓ cup flour
1 teaspoon baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
1 cup sliced pitted dates
1 cup chopped walnuts

Beat eggs and sugar until thick and lemon-colored. Mix and sift flour, baking powder and salt, add to dates and nuts. Fold fruit and nut mixture into beaten eggs and sugar. Pour into well greased eight-inch square pan. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 30 minutes, or until evenly browned. Serve small squares hot with foamy pudding sauce, or cut into 24 small cookies, preferably while still warm, and sprinkle with powdered sugar.

AVOIDING NEEDLESS FUNERAL EXPENSE . . .

The management of the Finefrock Funeral Home has no desire that any family, in the hour of grief, should spend more for a funeral than they would have spent when minds were normal.

We have a large display of caskets in a wide range of prices that can meet any need. Each family may select as they wish, but we advise moderation when we know that cost should be considered.

Many people are making advance arrangements. It is a wise precaution, and one that we invite.

That Extra Something!

...You can spot it every time

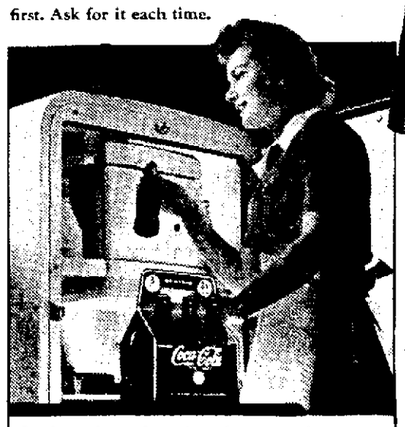
EVERY woman knows it's the extra touches that make a house a home. Ice-cold Coca-Cola is something she likes to add . . . to brighten the most important part of a home, the people in it.

Coca-Cola is served with pride. Everybody will be pleased. Its quality carries on, never losing the freshness of appeal which first delighted you.

Call for Coca-Cola by its full name or by its friendly abbreviation, Coke. It's the real thing.

* * *

Wartime limits the supply of Coca-Cola. Those times when you cannot get it, remember: Coke, being first choice, sells out first. Ask for it each time.



In these days of wartime shortages, there may not be as much Coca-Cola as before. But still enough for many pauses that refresh. It's wise to buy ahead for the home refrigerator.
